District to build road to kindergarten site

The 12-acre site donated to the R-6 school district for a new kindergarten building is a bargain, even if the district has to build a road to the property, Superintendant Sam Harbin said Thursday night.

Harbin met with a group of civic club and Parent-Teacher Organization presidents and kindergarten committee members.

The district will have to extend Salcedo Road 1,200 feet east of North Main Street to reach the property and then extend another 500 feet along the south edge of the property.

It will cost the district about $37,500 for a 36-foot wide street with curbs and gutters. It will cost another $8,000 to extend water and utility lines to the site. A sewer line already runs across the north edge of the land.

Harbin said the district would have had to build some type of road and run utility lines to any site it chose for the school. He pointed out that the district built Twitty Drive, which runs in front of the junior high school.

Harbin said it would be in the district's interest to see Salcedo Road extended all the way to Ingram Street. That way school buses will have a second exit from the school.

He said the district has been talking with other agencies about getting the street extended, he did not identify the other agencies.

The kindergarten is expected to be ready for the 1978 school year if voters approve the bond issue.

The new kindergarten has been the districts number one priority, Harbin said.

It will replace aging wooden buildings located at Sikeston Memorial Airport. The old buildings were orginally constructed as military barracks during World War II.

District officials freely admit to worrying about the safety of the children in the school. It is a fire hazard, they say, and located at the end of a runway.

The size of the bond issue has not yet been determined because design work on the building has not been completed.

If voters approve the bond issue on Sept. 20, the district's tax levy probably will be increased by 20 to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation, Harbin said.

The property was donated by Mrs. Dorothy Matthews and her children. Harbin said he did not know the exact value of the property, but that the property between the site and North Main Street is zoned commercial and valued at $30,000 an acre.

He said the school site would probably be worthless, but still much more than the cost of putting in a road and utilities.

Harbin said the board gave the family two assurances when it accepted the property: That if the site is not used for a new school, the property will revert to the Matthews family; and that if and when a new elementary school is needed for the north side of Sikeston, it will be built on the same site.

For that reason, the board has asked the Architect to design the kindergarten so that it can be part of an eventual kindergarten elementary school complex.

The building will contain 22,748 square feet in 14 rooms. It probably will be a concrete block structure with brick veneer. It will house 400 five year olds, but can be converted to hold more in the future if that becomes necessary.

Stearnes said the design work has not been completed, because the site had not been donated and accepted until last week.

46 dead, dozens lost in Pennsylvania flood

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Refugees and a volunteer army battling mud and fatigue have found 46 dead in this flood-raveged city. Dozens are missing, and damage is put at more than $200 million.

On Thursday, bodies were pulled from bashed houses and twisted rubble littering the scarred seven-county flood area in southwestern Pennsylvania.

"We're expecting more bodies," said deputy Cambria County coroner Arthur Keiper from his makeshift morgue in the East Hills Elementary School near here. Officials said they had no way yet to accurately guess how many might be dead.

Scattered looting was reported throughout the area, and some residents armed themselves to protect what little they had left. Police arrested three men ransacking a Johnstown bar Thursday night.

Half an inch of fresh rain belted this devastated city of 41,000 Thursday afternoon, briefly raising fears of another deluge, before tapering off to a steady drizzle.

"Oh, my God, were people concerned," said county Civil Defense director Elmer Shenk. "It looked like a major storm, and that's all we would have needed."

The city was evacuated shortly before the storm, which set off mudslides in several areas. Winds up to 65 miles an hour whipped up caked mud, cutting visibility to 100 yards.

The National Weather Service forecast good weather for the weekend, however, giving cleanup crews hope that they would be able to resume work in earnest.

"There is hardly anything that creates the mess a flood creates," said Jack Minnotte, chief of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' engineering division assigned here.

The Corps said damage in Johnstown alone would exceed $117 million.

"Had we not built the flood control project in Johnstown after the 1936 flood, those da,ages today would be $465 million," said Herman Lardieri, a flood plain management expert.

President Carter declared the region a federal disaster area on Thursday and dispatched special assistant Greg Schneiders to serve, as Schneiders described it, as the President's "eyes and ears."

He told reporters he plans to set up one-stop relief centers where victims can take care of all their flood-related problems at one time.

An estimated 50,000 persons were displaced when torrential rains pushed mountain rivers and streams over their banks along a 70-mile stretch of the Conemaugh River valley.

College dormitories and school buildings were converted to makeshift shelters, but many survivors simply packed what few belongings they could find and pulled out.

Heat wilts beans

A month of high temperatures and low rainfall is taking a toll on many area farm fields. These soybeans on the Flossie Blackburn farm, Route Two, are wilting and dying. Little relief for the plants is in sight. While temperatures are expected to be cooler this weekend, hot weather is being predicted for next week. (Daily Standard photo)

Bodies of 9 burn; some bound, gagged

PROSPECT, Conn. (AP) — The bodies of a mother, seven of her children and a visiting cousin were found in their fire-wrecked house early today in this suburb of Waterbury, police said. Authorities confirmed that at least half the victims were bound and gagged, but would not comment on reports that the woman was shot.

A state police spokesman also would not comment on a report that the fire appeared to have been set and smoldered for at least an hour before firemen arrived at 4:10 a.m.

Police said a neighbor, Mrs. Joseph Palino, smelled smoke and heard screams coming from the home and notified fire authorities.

The dead women was identified as Cheryl Beaudoin. Police identified the children as Fred, 12, Sharon, 10, Debbie, 9, Paul, 8, Rod, 6, Holly, 5, and Mary Lou, 4. The eighth child was identified as Jennifer Santoro, 6, a visiting cousin from Waterbury.

Police said the husband, Fred Beaudoin, was working the midnight to 7 a.m. shift as a machinist at the Pratt & Whitney plant in North Haven at the time of the fire.

Drugs stolen in E. Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- A breakin Wednesday night are early Thursday morning at Beuton's Drug Shop, 124 North Washington St. neted thieves $121 and drugs and damage was valued at $257, according to s Sgt. Bill Aycock, who investigated with police chief Jake Abner.

Aycock said today that the various types of drugs stolen were taken off shelves and were not classified as narcotics or controlled drugs. Some refrigerated medicine had been opened and spilled out into the refrigerator Aycock said.

The Community has expressed a great deal of interest in the special Red Cross blood drive scheduled for Tuesday, Harold Jones, administrator, and Dr. Daniel Rosenstein, pathologist at Missouri Delta Community Hospital, said in a press conference at the hospital this morning.

The special blood drive is being conducted because "response to previous blood drives has not brought about nearly enough donors," Jones said.

Dr. Rosenstein, who is a member of the medical advisory committee of the Missouri-Illinois Regional Red Cross Program, said that while daily use of units of blood at the hospital varies, the use averages between 100 and 150 units per month.

Jones said the hospital has approximately 250 units pledged and hope to get at least 400 in the upcoming blood drive and urged anyone who wishes to give blood to come Tuesday. The blood donor station will be set up in the old nurse's residence building between the hospital and the First Christian Church.

2 treated for injuries in accidental shooting

Two women were treated for injuries received when a shotgun accidently discharged Thursday night.

Treated in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital for shrapnel wounds to the leg and thigh and released were Lee Ann Beck, 23, of 1009 Virginia St., and Margorie O. Beck, 45, of 947 Vernon St.

The accident occurred about 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Street address while the two women were standing in the driveway with their husbands talking.

Public safety officers said Joe Beck Sr. 947 Vernon St. and his wife drove up in an old pickup truck he had just bought. As he got out of the truck, he handed a shotgun to his son, Joe Beck Jr.

The younger Beck pointed the barrell of the gun down and rested it on the concrete driveway.

About 20 minutes later, while they were talking, the gun discharged and pieces of concrete and pellet struck both women.

County Court sets voter registration check date

BENTON — The Scott County Court Thursday heard from Scott County Treasurer Hess Porter, who reported receiving $9,841 from the Department of Revenue Sharing for anti-recession funds. The court also discussed setting Jan. 11, 1978 as the date to check jury boxes for voter registrations.

Porter, said the $9,841 check represents the county's quarterly payment for the period July 1 through Sept. 30.

The anti-recession funds are based on the amount of unemployed persns in the county. The annual amount of money allowed for this program by the federal government to Scott County is $90,191 Porter said.

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig of Sikeston discussed setting Jan. 11, 1978 for the County Court and his office to review voter registration in the different townships of the county and to bring the lists of possible jurors up to date.

The court agreed to this date.

John Bollinger, Scott County Recorder of Deeds, reported to the court that with the passage of Senate Bill 112 the recording fees will be increased on Sept. 28.

Bollinger said the new rates will include: Conveying real estate, $3 for first page and $2 for each additional page plus a $1 state users fee; recording deeds of trust, releases, affidavits, etc., $3 for first page and $2 for each additional page. The size of the page will be up to the legal size 8½x14.

For recording plats larger than 18x24 inches, the rate will be $25 for each page and copying charges will be $5 for each page.

Bollinger said this is the first recording fee increase allowed since 1951.

Burglars take food, money

Burglars took meat and candy bars from the Trade Winds Cafe and change from a vending machine at Helms Quick Sak, according to the Public Safety Department.

Public Safety officers found a broken window about 4:18 a.m. Thursday in the Trade Winds Cafe, 875 W. Malone Ave. The window was used by burglars, who stole 20 pounds of hamburger worth $17 and 91 candy bars worth $5.

A vending machine was pryed open between 3:10 a.m. and 3:20 a.m. Thursday at Helmes Quick Sak, 110 Branum St. About $10 was taken from the coin box.

Rural electric co-op meeting set Aug. 9

SIKESTON — The 40th annual membership meeting of the Scott-New Madrid-Mississippi Electric Cooperative will be held at the high school in Sikeston on Aug. 9, starting at 7:30 p.m., according to D. H. Zaricor, co-op general manager.

Progress and financial reports will be given and four directors will be elected to the 12-member board.

Entertainment will be provided by the Liberty Gospel Group, of the Cape Girardeau area. Prizes will be awarded to members in attendance.

Guest speaker will be Derry Brownfield, who has a farm program on 50 radio stations in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee, using the familiar sign-off, "I'm Derry Brownfield, reporting agriculture."

According to his informational material, Brownfield's following hass grown because farmers and others in agri-related fields not only receive the factual information they expect concerning cattle, hogs, grain, beans and cotton, but also like the way he explains how other facts of the nation's industry effect agriculture. He is known to "not hesitate to verbally chastise the secretary of agriculture, Congressmen or anyone else whom he believes is not acting in the best interest of agriculture."

An addition to the program will be a presentation of a resolution of commendation from the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce to the co-op for its 40 years of service in rural electrification.

The cooperative now serves 11,880 member-consumers over 2,454 miles of distribution lines in Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Bollinger and Cape counties. In 1976 the group consumed 105,919,782 kilowatt hours of electricity at a wholesale cost of $2,165,270.08.

MAJORITY RULE'S OTHER SIDE

If only the bullheaded, white-dominated regimes of South Africa and Rhodesia would concede power gracefully to their black majorities, everything would be dandy on that continent, we are told.

Andrew Young, our highly quotable ambassador to the U.N. who seems to create a new diplomatic flap every day, recently branded the government of South Africa as "illegitimate" because "just a few million people make decisions about a nation of more than 20 million."

But black Americans, of whom Young is one, should of all people be realistic about majority rule, submits a South African newspaper correspondent in this country.

Since black Americans live as a minority in a white majority, and white South Africans are destined to live as a minority in a black majority, the two actually share a common lot, says Henry Katzew. Because of their own experience, black Americans could be a catalyst for greater understanding between white and black in South Africa. Yet there are increasingly strident calls for "majority rule."

"What are you fighting for?" he asks. "For human rights in South Africe or majority rule?" It may not even turn out to be majority rule, but rule in the name of the majority by self-appointed black dictators or oligarchies.

Unfortunately, we can already guess the answer. When majority rules does come to South Africa and Rhodesia, as it eventually must, either peacefully or through bloodshed, will Andrew Young and others who are so concerned about human rights in those countries fall as suddenly silent as they now are about the victims of "legitimate" black tyrants like Idi Amin?

INFLATION MARCHES ON

Consumer prices in the United States rose in May by "only" 0.6 per cent, and the administration was quick to point to the figure as a favorable sign.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell called it "a significant decline" and predicted that the inflation rate will slow in coming months.

True, May's rise in the consumer price index was more moderate than the 0.8 per cent increase in April and the full 1 per cent jump in February, but is it anything to be satisfied with? We think not.

On an annual basis, the May figure works out to an increase of 7.2 per cent, which is too high for economic good health. For the entire year, White House economists forecast a rise in consumer prices of 6 to 6.5 per cent.

Their target, even if achieved, is historically above average for the country and would be dangerous if sustained for several years. For example, while 6 per cent inflation is less scary than the double-digit version of the recent past, it would cut the dollar's value in half in about seven years.

Inflation – built-in, persistent and endemic -- remains the single most serious threat to the nation's economy, and it must not become a matter of complacency.

Human Rights And The Wilmington 10

The Russians seem to have seized on the case of the Wilmington 10 in the hope of distracting the world's attention from their own human rights violation. It's a shrewd tactic; the sentencing alone—up to 34 years for burning a grocery store— is compelling evidence that this North Carolina trial was one of those ugly travesties that periodically besmirch the criminal justice system.

The burning took place in 1971, during a period of high racial tension in Wilmington, N.C. The original trial jury, which had a black majority, was excused and replaced by one with a white majority. Three prosecution witnesses later recanted the testimony that helped send nine black men and one shite woman to prison. Two potentialdefense witnesses said that intimidation by the prosecution prevented them from testifying.

Yet a North Carolina appellate judge has ruled that the defendants weren't entitled to a new trial because there had been no "substantial denial" of their rights the first time around. The defense attorneys said they would appeal.

Given this history, at the very least there's reasonable doubt that the Wilmington 10 committed the crime for which they were convicted. At worst, there was perjured testimoney, prosectorial misconduct and jucicial intemperance. The case is a disgrace to American justice as well as godsend to Soviet propagandists.

It doesn't follow, however, that President Carter's criticism of human rights violations in the Soviet Union are invalid because human rights have also been denied in North Carolina. It's worth noting that the American press is as free to report on the Wilmington case as it is on the harassment of Soviet dissidents. Certainly the reverse isn't true of Tass and Pravda.

What's more, Carter has never suggested that the United States is beyond criticism in human rights matters. Indeed, he has scrupulously noted certain restrictions that conflict with the Helsinki treaty's "basket three' provisions, and in at least one case his Administration has allowed the restrictive practices to continue. The point is not that the United States has a perfect record on human rights, but that totalitarian states shouldn't escape criticism abroad simply because they have the power to stamp it out at home.

May Be Masonry Bonanza

If the energy plans of President Carter are fully approved and implemented, hundreds of thousands of homes in the United States will be converting from gas and oil to coal heating equipment.

For the older homes that used coal or wood in years gone by a chimney will be no problem. Most already have one or more in fair or good condition and the only expense will be the coal and wood burning furnace.

For most of the newer homes, converstion to coal will not only save vanishing oil and gas but will create a lot of jobs for brick and stone masons. Most of these homes do not have chimneys adequate for coal, and new ones will be necessary. One insurance man also pointed out that where a new chimney becomes necessary, most of them will probably be built on the outside of the present home, adding a fire-safety factor.

Many of us, however, view with less than delight the prospects of having to go back to shoveling coal and carrying out ashes and cinders. But here too, there will be one advantage -- we'll have something to spread on the slick ice on our driveways and streets.

Double Dippers

Washington Bureaucrats have their own language, which often mystifies the rest of us. For example, do you know the difference between a double dipper and a double scooper? According to Side Taylor, research director of the National Taxpayers' Union, a double dipper is a retired military person who holds a civilian job with the government and collects double federal compensation-his pension plus his salary-at the same time.

A double scooper, on the other hand is someone on the federal payroll who also has a close relatives on the government payroll; for example, a Congressman who hires his wife as his administrative assistant. And this brings us to the dipper scooper, which, according to Taylor, "is a double dipper who is also a double scooper."

Remember a few years back when state officials hailed the multi-flora rose as a boon to conservation, ideal for fences, around ponds, for wildlife protection, etc., etc., etc.?

Like the old time hedge fences, it soon exhausted its popularity, and instead of an advantage, has proved to be a general nuisance to everyone. So much so that the Legislature had a bill intended to label it as a noxious and dangerous weed and call for its eradication. The bill didn't become law, as it died in committee, but in some later session it will be approved.

Multi-flora rose suffered the same end result as a lot of other fads--too much enthusiasm before all the facts were in.

Repairing a completely wrecked automobile by replacing all the parts would cost more than four times as much as buying a new car, according to the American Mutual Insurance Alliance.

The Tourist's Prayer

Heavenly Father, look down on us your humble, obedient tourist servants who are doomed to travel this earth, taking photographs, mailing postcards, buying souvenirs and walking around in drip-dry underwear. We beseech you, O Lord, to see that our plane is not hijacked, our luggage is not lost and our overweight baggage goes unnoticed.

Give us this day divine guidance in our selection of hotels. We pray that the phones work, and that the operators speak our tongue, that there is no mail waiting from our children which would force us to cancel the rest of our trip.

Lead us to good, inexpensive restaurants where the wine is included in the price of the meal. Give us the wisdom to tip correctly in currencies we do not understand. Make the natives love us for what we are and not for what we can contribute to their worldly goods.

Grant us the strength to visit the museums, the cathedrals, the palaces, and if, perchance, we skip an historic monument to take a nap after lunch, have mercy on us for our flesh is weak.

Dear God, protect our wives from "bargains" they don't need or can't afford. Lead them not into temptation for they know not what they do.

Almighty Father, keep our husbands from looking at foreign women and comparing them to us. Save them from making fools of themselves in nightclubs. Abovealll, please do not forgive them their trespasses for they know exactly what they do.

And when our voyage is over, grant us the favor of finding someone who will look at our home movies and listen to our stories, so our lives as tourists will not have been in vain. This we ask you in the name of Conrad Hilton, Thomas Cook and the American Express. Amen.

Beware The Solar Con Men

The phenomenal growth of the solar heating industry has generated worry both within and outside that industry that consumers may be ripped off by unscrupulous or incompetent operators lured by the Carter Administration's proposed tax benefit incentives for solar conversion.

In the rush to harness the sun's limitless power as an alternative to vanishing fossil fuels, all sorts of people have perceived solar energy as a promising new field for profit. The Federal Trade Commission is developing a program of standards and advertising on solar equipment "to forestall consumer exploitation." The Department of Housing and Urban Development also is working on uniform standards for such installations and the Energy Research and Development Administration has a toll-free telephone line to answer consumers' questions.

The Council of Better Business Bureaus warns that "some manufacturers may be overenthusiastic about their products" and may exaggerate the effectiveness of solar heating or downplay its costs. At an installation cost of $4500 a thousand square feet, or more, solar must be financed in the house mortgage for most families. And there still must be a backup system for cloudy days.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

EMBASSY EAVESDROPPING

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

At last the national news media are reporting on what many people for many months have believed is the biggest national security scandal in the country: the fact that Soviet agents in Washington, D.C., are eavesdropping on most of the long-distance calls made to or from our government offices.

The Rockefeller Commission on CIA Activities Within the United States originally had nine pages on this subject in its 1975 report, but all but two paragraphs were deleted because Henry Kissinger didn't want to upset detente.

Sen. Frank Church's committee report on the CIA referred to this situation with one paragraph, stating simply that we can't do anything about it.

Ignoring the problem did not make it go away. A computer complex in the Soviet Embassy has the capability of monitoring 12,000 telephone conversations a minute and of picking up all telephone conversations transmitted by microwave within twelve miles of the Soviet Embassy.

The Soviets are carrying on this massive eavesdropping from each of their six pieces of property in our country. These are located in Washington, D.C., the United Nations, Long Island, Maryland, San Francisco and Chicago.

By monitoring American telephone calls, the Soviets can get access to all kinds of secret military and economic information known to executive branch officials, members of Congress and some private citizens. Out of the traffic of unimportant phone calls, Soviet high-speed computers sort out those containing sensitive information.

There is widespread speculation that such telephone eavesdropping may have given the Soviets secret economic information which enabled them to make the deals for their huge grain purchases in 1972, which ultimately became known as the Great Grain Robbery.

It is even possible that "Deep Throat," the mysterious informer who passed inside information about Watergate scandals to the press, may have been somebody in the Soviet Embassy who learned the secret tidbits by telephone monitoring.

The United States has similar monitoring equipment in our U. S. Embassy in Moscow, but it is only about 10 per cent effective because the Russians jam it by beaming radiation at our embassy. This is what causes the high radiation readings at our embassy.

Scientists and physicians are divided on the question of how harmful this is to the health of American personnel and whether it caused the several cases of cancer among U.S. diplomats who have been stationed there. U. S. protests against this deliberate radiation of our embassy have fallen on deaf Soviet ears.

The recent news stories which detail the facts of Soviet Embassy eavesdropping on American telephone conversations suggest that there are only three solutions to this problem: burying all the telephone lines underground, or installing scrambling or coding devices.

There is one simple solution, however, that would stop it immediately at no cost. Just tell the Soviets to stop their outrageous eavesdropping or else we will close their embassy and consulates and expel their espionage atgents and electronic experts.

For years, the liberals have defended the practice of extending diplomatic recognition to Communist countries on the argument that our embassies serve as valuable "listening posts." It is now abundantly clear that the Soviet Union is doing 90 per cent of the listening.

$5 Special Delivery Letter?

Predicts 50-Cent first class mail; union chief sees postal system ending

NEW YORK — I'm dealing with some flat predictions here -- hitting you in the pocketbook -- by a fellow who has a Jimmy the Greek record on crystal-ball gazing. This chap, postal union chief Moe Biller, who led the 1970 Easter mail rebellion which brought out the National Guard, says we'll soon be paying 25 cents, and not long afterwards 50 cents, a piece to mail a first class letter.

Also if I project him right -- and it's my projection -- the price of a first class special delivery will run into four and then five dollars -- each.

And, says Biller, the postal system as we -- and American commerce and industry -- know it will go the way of the dinosaur and the free lunch.

Biller is a militant and proud of it. But it isn't the politics of this man, who leads the 24,000-member New York Metro Area Postal Union (AFL-CIO), which I discuss. What is crucial is his knowledge of the postal system so vital to the sheer existence of American business, of much of the publishing world, of senior citizens, of those living on Social Security or corporate dividends.

Biller, who also speaks for 70,000 postal workers (mostly inside employes) throughout the Northeast, predicts the cracking of the mail pipelines, the clogging of bulk mail arteries and the full collapse of the U.S. Postal Service in the very foreseeable future.

I take him seriously. I didn't some years ago when he warned that a first class letter would soon cost 15 cents. Now business is heading towards a 16-cent stamp. And to set the framework right, remember the hundreds of millions of dollars American commerce and industry such as A.T. & T., Consolidated Edison or insurance companies, etc., pay for postage each year.

Sooner or later this added cost gets passed on to the consumer -- everybody who pays bills, insurance premiums and has a telephone, for example.

After the blackout here I spoke at length with Biller. As he suggested I looked at the record. Until 1967 first class mail was two and three cents. Then, to 1968, this stamp cost four pennies. Later it was a nickel until 1967. Then to 1971 -- actually some six years ago -- it was six cents. It was at that time that Biller warned of the 15-cent stamp. Biller recalls that "people laughed at me but now I'm predicting 25 cents for a first class stamp in another five years and 50 cents in about a decade. Just watch."

As for special delivery, it went from 10 cents in the late '30s to $1.25 today and shortly it will go to $2.10, plus regular postage, of course. It can't be too long before it's three dollars a letter. Or $4 or $5.

"So you can kiss the special delivery goodbye," Biller said dolefully.

"As for the U.S. Postal Service itself, its disintegration began in the late '40s under Postmaster Donaldson. He said we don't need three mail deliveries a day. Two will do. Now you get one if you're lucky. History shows that the post office once made four and five deliveries a day . . . but today's Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar is ripping the post office apart. And I believe President Carter should ask him to resign.

. . The post office has a $14 billion budget and is constantly losing big money."

There are areas for profit, Biller says, but Bailar won't take them, he charges. Like what, I asked. Biller says that one of the most famous American data processing and multi-national corporations offered the post office a message system which guaranteed a $50-million-a-year profit. Bailar turned it down, Biller charged.

Then we talked of the coming postal rate increase due next May. First class mail goes to 16 cents. "Mom and Pop" citizens' letters will stay at 13 cents -- if properly and technically addressed. Across the board the postage rate hikes will average 22 per cent.

"Start with the small businessman or marginal producer," Biller said angrily. "This could be the straw to break the camel's back and put him out of business. Now if you're Mr Big like A.T. & T. or New York Life, which spend millions a year on first class mail, Bailar is really telling you to take your business elsewhere. And they will."

This is the era of the electronic message transmission and soon enough it will be cheaper than mail. So the post office will lose on first class missives, its biggest profitmaker today. Then what happens to the whole system? Americans mail 89 billion pieces a year.

And Biller says the national unions, representing 600,000 tightly organized postal employes, will begin new wage negotiations with the system next April, a month before the new increases and possible cuts in services take effect. Delivery cuts will slash thousands of jobs. And probably kick off a national postal strike. That could blackout the nation too.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

"Human Error" Creates International Incident

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- An ugly collection of weapons, packed in cartons labeled "books," was shipped recently from the United States to the oil sheikdom of Qatar.

The boxes got as far as the London airport, where they were opened. Instead of textbooks for the University of Qatar, the astonished airport authorities found 12 machineguns; 50 pistols and ammunition to fit them.

The British airport personnel immediately notified the U.S. Customs Service, which alerted the State Department. Then the Transportation Department was brought into the case. Now the incident has escalated into an international incident.

A State Department investigation quickly determined that the Qatar embassy had arranged for all the proper licenses to ship the weapons to the sheikdom. They were not intended, apparently, to start a revolution or to mount a commando raid against Israel. The guns were supposed to be delivered as a routine shipment to the Qatar police.

But the driver who hauled the cartons to the Dulles International Airport, it turned out, had previously shipped some books to the University of Qatar in similar cartons. When he was asked what the latest cartons contained, he innocently answered: "Books." The cartons full of arms, therefore, were shipped out as books.

The State Department, convinced that Qatar was not smuggling arms disguised as books, dismissed the case as "human error." This should have ended the incident.

But over at the Transportation Department, the Hazardous Materials Office publishes an obscure newsletter. The editors somehow learned about the case of the lethal textbooks. So the newsletter reported tersely last month:

"Embassy of Qatar ... offered shipment of small arms and ammunition to air carrier which was described as 'books' and was improperly marked, packed and labeled."

To the sensitive Arabs at the Qatar embassy, the throwaway newsletter looked like an official government publication. It appeared that the federal government, or at least the Hazardous Materials Office, was accusing the friendly little nation of Qatar of arms smuggling.

"We tried to explain all this," a furious spokesman told us. "We talked to the State Department, to the Customs. We are not smugglers!"

Footnote: Our investigation indicates that just as Qatar made a "human error" in misstating the contents of the cartons, so the Transportation Department made a "human error" in not telling the full story of the incident.

Corporate Pressure: Two corporate giants, General Motors and Procter & Gamble, have used their economic clout to block the establishment of the proposed Consumer Protection Agency.

White House sources tell us that both companies threatened to withdraw business from Blue Cross unless the medical insurer softened its support of the consumer agency. Blue Cross insures approximately 750,000 General Motors workers and about 50,000 Procter & Gamble employees.

President Carter has endorsed the Consumer Protection Agency, which would become the consumers' official advocate in Washington. But many corporations fear it would develop into a bureaucratic Ralph Nader that would constantly hound them. Business lobbyists have been swarming over Capitol Hill, therefore, to oppose the creation of the new agency.

But the Blue Cross Association, in behalf of its 84 million members, wrote a strong letter to President Carter on June 1 supporting the proposed agency. "We do not look upon the Agency for Consumer Advocacy as a potential opponent," declared the letter, "but as a partner in identifying consumer issues and meeting consumer needs."

We have checked out the next development carefully with trustworthy sources. They say that Blue Cross executives heard from both General Motors and Procter & Gamble.

According to these sources, General Motors threatened to withdraw some employees from Blue Cross insurance unless the association changed its tune. Procter & Gamble made a similar threat to invoke "economic sanctions" against Blue Cross, our sources say.

Spokesmen for both companies vigorously denied that General Motors or Procter & Gamble had threatened Blue Cross in any way. An official Blue Cross spokesman acknowledged that several corporations, including General Motors and Procter & Gamble, had protested the Blue Cross letter. But he also denied that any companies had threatened to withdraw business.

Nevertheless, White House sources say that Washington representatives of Blue Cross called the White House consumer office and tried to water down the June 1 letter.

A Blue Cross executive told the White House disarmingly that the association was not supporting any particular bill. Yet the June 1 letter specifically mentioned the proposed Agency for Consumer Advocacy. The executive also said the Association could not speak for its 84 million members. Yet the June 1 letter emphasized the 84 million membership.

In the end, the Blue Cross official mentioned that the letter was being weakened to "placate" corporate clients. He also confided that General Motors and Procter & Gamble had threatened economic retaliation.

Todays News In Brief

Cannon Dam safety questioned

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The General Accounting office is questioning the safety of the Clarence Cannon Dam in northeast Missouri, according to a report in Friday's St. Louis GlobeDemocrat.

GAO investigators found that "defective" fill with excessive moisture was used in the dam foundation and "a buried river channel" was discovered in the foundation, the GAO said in a report to Congress.

The $232 million water project, being built by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is one of the state's largest and most costly, the newspaper said.

Assistant Army Secretary Charles R. Ford stated in a letter in the GAO report that the design has been altered "as needed" during construction "to account for conditions revealed during construction to insure a safe product."

However GAO said: "In our view the question of dam safety has not been completely resolved, particularly in light of the current concern over dam safety, and will remain so until the project is evaluated independently.

"Therefore we recommend that the secretary of the Army obtain an evaluation of the overall safety of the project from an expert, independent consultant."

Heat toll continues to rise

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Three possible heat-related deaths were reported Thursday, as temperatures went into the 90s for the tenth day running.

At last 11 heat-related deaths were reported in the St. Louis area earlier this week.

A 74-year-old woman and her husband were brought to Homer G. Phillips Hospital Wednesday night, apparently suffering from heat stroke, a spokesman said.

She was dead on arrival and her husband died Thursday morning. Their names were not released, pending notification of relatives.

Police said the body of Alfred Schneider, 83, was discovered in bed Thursday by relatives. He was last seen one week ago. His home had no air conditioning.

PFA figures hard to find

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Star reported that the Missouri attorney general is having trouble locating two principal figures in the Progressive Farmers Association at Springfield, a pseudo-farm cooperative at Springfield in which upwards of 7,000 investors apparently lost around $12 million when it went bankrupt.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying Russell E. Phillips, the promoter generally considered to be the mastermind of the operation, is in a southern state. It also said there are reports that Donald E. Burks, a former preident of PFA, no longer is in the country.

The attorney general's office has served on other officers of PFA a notice that it intends to file suit against the firm accusing it of irregularities in the sale of securities.

Missouri's consumer protection law requires that notice be served at least three days before such suits are filed. The law also provides if the accusations are established in court the attorney general can seek the return of money taken from investors.

4 bodies found in elevator

PARK RIDGE, Ill. (AP) — The bodies of four men, all shot to death, were found this morning in an office building elevator in this affluent suburb northwest of Chicago, authorities said.

"I pushed the elevator button and when the door opened I saw them," said B. L. Shershon, an employe in the building. "The four men were piled atop each other in a bloody mass," he said.

The bodies were first discovered by a secretary as she arrived for work.

"She came screaming out of the building, running across the street hysterical," said an attendant at a nearby service station, from where police were called.

The bodies were found about 7:30 a.m.

Other details were not immediately available.

Anti-inflation drive undercut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, disappointed over U.S. Steel Corp.'s decision to raise steel prices, says the move may undercut the administration's anti-inflation program. Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, complained that the steel industry has raised its prices recently much faster than the other American industries.

Brown making Korean trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown leaves Washington today for a trip to South Korea, from which the United States is planning to withdraw its 33,000 troops. Brown will discuss the withdrawal during his trip and negotiate a transfer of U.S. weapons and equipment to keep Korea secure militarily in light of the troop cutback. His journey comes on the heels of publication of a Pentagon task force study allegedly showing that South Korea would need up to $8 billion in equipment to insure its security, including about 250 jet fighters, and hundreds of helicopters, observation planes, missiles and guns.

Egypt, Libya trade charges

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt and Libya accused each other of provoking an air and armor battle Thursday on their border in the North African desert. Cairo said Libyan forces had invaded Egypt from the west and were repelled. The Libyans said Egyptian troops had attacked a Libyan village, killing women and children. The Egyptians said they destroyed 40 tanks and two Libyan warplanes. Libya made no report on losses.

Last woman leader ousted

School board members lose coverage

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — About 2,000 members of the Missouri School Boards Association have lost their liability insurance coverage, MSBA Executive Director James Hart of Columbia said Thursday.

The association's group policy was canceled June 30 and so far the MSBA's search for a new group policy has been unsuccessful, Hart said in an interview.

The insurance covers the individual school board members for any omissions or errors they might make in handling their responsibilities as members of local boards. The MSBA policy was carried by Continental National America (CNA), a group of insurance companies which is headquartered in Chicago, Ill.

The firm cited the high number of claims as the reason for its cancellation of the association's policy, Hart said.

The association had received notification June 16 from CNA that the MSBA liability insurance would be discontinued and although the association continued to negotiate with CNA it was unable to prevent the policy from being terminated, Hart said.

Disposal of hazardous wastes creates problem for Missouri

By SUE A MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Hazardous wastes pose complex problems. Not only are they difficult to define, they are difficult to dispose of and their disposal is often met with public opposition.

"We have to decide what to do with hazardous wastes and how to covercome the opposition of communities towards their disposal," said Joseph Eigner, hazardous waste project chief for the division of environmental quality, department of natural resources.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale recently signed a bill approving the formation of a Hazardous Waste Management Commission for the state. The seven-member appointed commission will be responsible for defining and regulating hazardous wastes.

But until the law becomes effective Oct. 13, the Department of Natural Resources is in "a tough period of transition," Eigner said.

"We are well on our way to developing a good program," he said. "But until the commission is appointed, we are handling problems as they occur."

The two main types of problems have been deciding what to do with hazardous wastes and dealing with community opposition. Eigner said the problems are closely interrelated.

"Once we find a geologically safe place to locate a waste treatment center, we may run into opposition," he said.

Hazardous wastes are materials that are toxic, corrosive, irritating, radioactive, biologically infectious, flammable or explosive. The wastes must present a serious threat to either those who handle them or to the environment, Eigner said.

This definition will be further specified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency next year. The Missouri commission will decide whether to accept or modify the EPA rules, regulations and standards.

"Hazardous waste is a national problem, and there should be uniform regulations between the states," Eigner said. "Missouri's law is one of the best in the country and should have no difficulty being approved by the EPA."

Eigner said the problem of locating hazardous waste treatment centers resembles other social issues, such as locating prisons.

"Everyone agrees that there is a serious problem and that it should be solved," he said. "But then when the time comes to choose a location, no one wants it in their own community."

Eigner said the solution for public opposition is "education and honesty.

"We want to show people that locating a center in an environmentally safe area will pose no health threats," he said. "If the treatment center is well constructed and maintained according to established standards, people should have no irrational fears of explosion or contamination.

"We also need to be open and honest with people," he said. "We shouldn't use euphamisms like 'hazardous waste,' 'industrial waste', but come right out and tell people what it is, what they can expect."

Eigner named several examples of hazardous wastes and the types of treatment they need. Floor sweepings from pesticide plants can be buried in "high quality landfills with no danger of polluting underground water sources," he said.

Lead and other materials used in the metal plating industry can be reduced to solid sludge and buried. Flammable solvents that would pose a problem if handled or released into the air can be recycled or destroyed in modern incinerators.

"The purpose of a treatment facility in the first place is to manage the most damaging substances, and people should be told that," he said. "In the past, though, we've found that often people would rather not know where the stuff is going. They'd rather not know that it's near them, but it's something they should be aware of."

Eigner said a good way of providing public education will be by holding more public hearings while locations are being decided. An amendment on the bill stipulates that treatment centers cannot be located closer than one-quarter mile within a residential area.

Eigner said the public hearings will help alleviate opposition once people learn there is little basis for their fears about landfills, incinerators, disposal wells and other types of treatment facilities.

Helping solve the problem of public opposition will go hand in hand with finding the best locations for waste treatment centers, he said. "We have a better and stronger law than most other states, and that can only work to our advantage."

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For nine seasons Buddy Ebsen starred in CBS' "Beverly Hillbillies." Now an Ebsen offspring, Bonnie, 25, is in a similarly bucolic series for NBC, "The Kallikaks."

It starts Aug. 3, runs five weeks and concerns a West Virginia family that moves to a desolate spot in California, opens a gas station and commences scheming ways to make a fast buck.

Bonnie, a tall, blue-eyed blonde lady with a quick smile, will be essaying Bobbi Lou, daughter of Papa Kallikak.(NBC hastens to claim its show isn't much like "Hillbillies." They note that Jed Clampett's clan was oil-rich, this one is dirt-poor and doesn't live in Beverly Hills, either. Hokay.)

Bonnie may come from a show biz family, but she says she's the only one of Ebsen's seven kids to take up acting, deciding on that after her first year in college.

It's customary for stars to tell their tots to stay out of show biz, that it's full of no-goodniks who'll break your heart.

Not Ebsen the Elder, she said: "No, he'd never say, 'Don't do this, don't do that.'"

And, she says, she didn't tell him she'd decided to become an actress until the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco approved her application to study there.

Miss E., who also studied with New York acting guru Sanford Meisner, did summer stock, appearing in "Our Town." Then she spent a lot of time simply watching her father and others work in his "Barnaby Jones" series on CBS.

Miss Ebsen, who subsequently landed roles in "Marcus Welby," "The Hardy Boys" and a TV movie, "Smashup on Interstate 5," says her first job was on pop's show, "Barnaby Jones."

She spoke of all this during the traditional interview in Burbank at the NBC commissary, where the soup of the day was potage a la thumb.

Earlier, she'd been reading through the third show's script with other cast members, among them David Huddleston (Papa Kallikak) and Peter Palmer, who starred in the Broadway and movie versions of "L'il Abner" and now is playing a German immigrant.

Bonnie made mention that if the Kallikaks click this summer, there's a good chance NBC will reprise it in January as a mid-season replacement. And if not?

"Well," she said in the lighthearted way some thespians have when facing possible misery, "then it's on to something else and hi-diddley-dee, an actor's life for me."

200 bills passed

JEFFERSON CITY — Approximately 200 pieces of legislation passed this session, including:

—Prohibiting geographic discrimination in homeowners insurance.

—Reducing cost of credit life insurance (purchased to cover repayments of debts in case of death or disability) by bringing it under state regulation.

—Allowing judges in divorce cases to grant visitation rights to grandparents.

—Decriminalizing public drunkeness.

—Establishing a means of handling dangerous and toxic waste materials.

—Allowing Missouri voters to decide whether the state constitution should permit certain sweepstakes.

—Letting Missourians vote on whether the constitution should allow cities to build utility facilities jointly with other cities, cooperatives, or private utilities.

—Adoption of a new criminal code designed to eliminate discrepancies clarify and organize the code into a more modern, effective system.

—Re-enactment of the death penalty in Missouri which the Supreme court should approve.

—A new formula for distributing state aid to local schools.

—Five times as many measures were defeated or died in the session:—Mandate statewide reassessment of property for tax purposes.

—Exempt food and drugs from sales tax.

—Establish a presidential primary in Missouri.

—Ratify the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment.

—Provide collective bargaining rights for public employes.. Agriculture remains an important part of Missouri's economy and the 1977 legislative session took note of that fact. A number of bills designed to aid the farming community won approval.

Soybean growers are expected to receive a boost from a law revising the procedure for establishing commodity merchandising councils in Missouri. The revision will allow councils to be established by a majority vote of the producers casting ballots if the voters in favor constitute a majority of the output of all registered producers (rather than requiring approval by voters representing 51 per cent of both the number and output of registered producers).

Once established, the council would allow the state agriculture Department to collect a one-half cent for each bushel of soybeans sold by consenting farmers. The money would go for market promotion as well as research. The 1974 sstate Pesticide Act was revised.

Farmers transporting goods by truck will be relieved of a hindrance when hauling small quantities. The legislature raised the limitation for requiring commercial vehicles to stop at weigh stations. Only trucks licensed for more than 12,000 pounds (rather than 6,000 pounds) will be subject to weight checks.

Rep. F. Eugene Copeland of New Madrid, felt the first session of the 79th General Assembly was a successful one. A measure handled by Copeland will render more money into the general revenue of the state by eliminating the "piracy" of tape recordings. For years, the "tape pirates" were re-recording tapes and cheating the artists out of their royalties and the state out of taxes. This law, which is already in exsistance federally and in most other states, will make such pirating unlawful. He also introduced a bill to aid in safety at railroads. The Public Safety Commission plans to issue films to be shown to school children, gearing them to think safely approaching railroad crossings.

Copeland also sponsored legislation to set up a Missouri Historical Commission which would be a watch dog for the citizens of the state, insuring no historical or valuable buildings, furniture, and other items could be sold or altered without approval. This would eliminate problems such as the sale of valuable antiques from the Governor's Mansion during the previous administration. This Bill did not gain final approval during the session because of time limitations; however, it gained attention and is endorsed by several historical groups and concerned citizens. Copeland plans to re-introduce the measure in January.

Other satisfying developments this year include the full expansion of the Job Service office in Malden. This office also handles unemployment insurances services for those claiming benefits under that program.

The construction and future opening of a tourist center in New Madrid County will aid travelers in the Bootheel as well as the entire state. A third grant to be spent in Copeland's legislative district will be the implementation of citywide signing for the City of Marston. The signs will be placed in conformance with the safer roads program designed to promote safety and minimize traffic accidents throughout the community. Cities in Missouri are receiving these grants through the National Traffic Safety Administration awarded because of the reduction in traffic fatalities as incentive funds.

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA — When the professional politicians began to analyze which seats in the House of Representatives might be considered "marginal" in next year's elections, they noticed something strange: The list included the 19th congressional district of Texas.

"Marginal district" is a term of art among politicians, referring to a House district where the current occupant is considered vulnerable because he or she received less than 55 per cent of the vote in the last election.

In theory, Texas' 19th district has no place on that list because ever since it was created in 1934 it has been the sole virtually undisputed property of one man — Rep. George H. Mahon, a lanky, soft-spoken Democrat who is the "dean" of the House and chairman of its powerful Appropriations Committee.

Mahon has been elected to 22 consecutive terms, and in 16 of those contests he had no Republican opposition. When the first foolhardy GOP opponent surfaced in 1946, Mahon walked off with 94.6 per cent of the vote. Four years later, he slipped a bit and captured a mere 93.9 per cent of the vote against another hapless Republican.

Three other opponents surfaced in the early 1960s, but only one even came close to gaining a third of the vote in the barren but oil-rich West Texas district whose only sizeable cities are Lubbock, Midland and a portion of Odessa. After handily disposing of that trio of pretenders to the throne, Mahon was reelected without opposition for another five consecutive terms. Last year, the manager of an Odessa brokerage house decided to take his chances against Mahon.

Conservative Republican Jim Reese captured 45.4 per cent of the vote. Mahon, with the remaining 54.6 per cent, plunged overnight from political patriarch of the Permian Basin to "marginal" congressman.

"The big thing was age," says one newspaper reporter who followed the Mahon-Reese contest. "Mahon admits to being 76 and a lot of people suspect he's even older. They just decided it was time for a change."

Early this month, Mahon unexpectedly disclosed that he will retire at the end of his current term. Most of the news accounts of his announcement failed to mention the congressman's little-publicized brush with political defeat.

But Mahon isn't the first House veteran to see the handwriting on the wall. In recent years, several committee chairmen have elected retirement rather than face the potential ignominy of voter rejection in their senior years.

Those who didn't understand that seniority had been transformed from an asset to a liability — men such as Reps. Emanuel Celler of New York and Wayne N. Aspinall of Colorado — suffered the disgrace of defeat.

Others were unceremoniously dumped from their chairmanships by an irreverent group of young legislators. Two once-powerful chairmen — Reps. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas and Wayne L. Hays of Ohio — left town in disgrace after highly publicized scandals.

1. It is a good idea to carry an extra supply of gasoline stored in a safety can in the trunk of your car.
   ☐ True ☐ False
2. There are certain times when it is safe to operate an edger-trimmer or lawn mower with the safety guards removed.
   ☐ True ☐ False

ANSWERS

1. False. Never store gasoline in your car or car trunk. Vapors may filter into the interior of the car, where ignition sources exist. Also, a rear-end collision, even a minor one, may have an explosive reaction.
2. False. Always keep the guards in place and in working order. Never remove them under any circumstances! Keep blades sharp. Keep hands away from cutting area.

Discuss extending Girl Scouting

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council announced today that Mrs. Les Heise of Malden, has been appointed Membership Extension Worker for the council.

As Membership Extension Worker, Mrs. Heise will work with the Neighborhood Chairmen in the Malden and Gideon Areas to extend Girl Scouting to the Hard to Reach which includes girls of migrant families, blacks, and those that live in outlying rural areas that have not had Girl Scouting. At a later date Mrs. Heise will also work with the Hayti and North Pemiscot Areas.

It is a recognized fact, that Girl Scouting can benefit girls from all social economic levels... from all races but due to the lack of exposure on the parts of parents and on the part of the girls themselves in the Hard to Reach Category, Girl Scouting has not been a viable organization to these young people. Mrs. Heise, the Neighborhood Chairmen and troop leaders will endeavor to reach these girls and help them to understand that Girl Scouting can make a positive influence on their live.

Mrs. Heise comes to this position with years of experience as a volunteer Girl Scout in the Malden area. Her Senior Girl Scout Troop is recognized as one of the most active in the council. She has served as 1st and 2nd Vice President of the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council Board of Directors and chairman of the Migrant Project and Plan of Work Project.She has long been noted for her interest in young people as well as her Girl Scout activities, Mrs. Heise is deeply involved in the child abuse program and the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Projects. Mrs. Heise resides with her husband, Les, in Malden, Mo.

Dear Ann Landers

Wife wants to know her rights

Dear Ann: For seven years I've been married to a man who can't seem to make it financially. I think it must be his lousy personality.

When we were first married we lived in Herb's home town because he worked for his dad. The business was crawling with relatives. Herb's dad died the following year and the usual family in-fighting began. I hated the town (nothing but hicks) and was glad when Herb agreed to accept a job in another city.

To make a long story short, he was transferred four times in six years and each place was worse than the last.

Yesterday Herb got a call from his brother. He has bought out the other relatives and wants us to come back to the hick town. Herb will be a part-owner and vice president of the business.

I hate the town. There is not one person there I'd care to associate with. Shouldn't a wife have something to say about where the family lives? Doesn't she have SOME rights? Please answer soon. I am — Mad, Mad, Mad

Dear M, M, M: Yes, a wife has some rights. But with rights come obligations -- and one of those obligations is to make a home wherever her husband can make a living.

I suspect someone in your family has a "lousy personality," but I don't think it's Herb. If you consider people "hicks," they know it. Small wonder you have no friends.

Defrost, kiddo. Learn to give. Make up your mind you're going to contribute something to the community. Small towns can be great fun. (I know.) Your husband needs a hand -- not a foot. It's not the towns you've been living in -- it's you.

Dear Ann: After two years of anonymous letters to others, about us, and many anonymous phone calls (which we taped) we were shocked to discover that they were perpetrated by a relative of some people we know.

Legal action (for which we have proof) would be expensive, exhausting and embarrassing. We are pleading with this person, for God's sake, get some help for yourself. What you are doing is a symptom of mental illness. If you continue we may have to call the police and we don't want to. Sign us -- Compassionate And Understanding

Dear Compassionate: Thousands of people who read your letter will feel uncomfortable. They will wonder if you mean THEM.

I hope every person who is ill at ease will assume he (or she) has been discovered and take your advice. The poison pens and telephone creeps are sickies and they need professional help.

Dear Ann Landers: I was divorced from my husband for 12 years. He passed away recently. Can I refer to myself as his widow? Would it be legal? Please answer in the paper. I've had a lot of arguments over this. -- Bay City

Dear Bay: I am not a lawyer and cannot give legal advice. If it's a common-sense answer you want I would say, "No." A widow is a woman whose husband has died. The man who died was not your husband.

It goes without saying that if he remarried, you should not refer to yourself socially as his widow. That title belongs to another.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Wedding to come

Ehlers-Ferrell

GERALD -- Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ehlers announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Lynn to Larry Ferrell. Ferrell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bartley Ferrell of Benton.

Miss Ehlers is a 1976 graduate of the Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau and is presently employed by the U.S. Treasury Department-Comptroller of Currency as an assistant National Bank Examiner at St. Louis.

Ferrell is also a 1976 graduate of the Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau and is employed as administrative assistant to the city attorney. He will attend the University of Missouri at Kansas City Law School this fall.

The couple plan a July wedding.

Patricia Lynn Ehlers

Getting married?

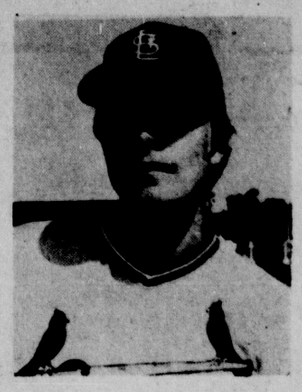
Forsch blanks Houston



ST. LOUIS (AP) — J. R. Richard's version of summer heat restricted the St. Louis Cardinals to four hits Thursday night, but each one counted.

In fact, on one of the few occasions Richard elected to ease the throttle the Cards' Keith Hernandez proved ready and dented the Houston Astros right-hander for a home run.

"I was standing there with the bat on my shoulder thinking, 'This time ol' J. R. is going to change up," said an impish Hernandez in joking tones.

"That fouled up the book a little," mused Hernandez, a fast ball hitter whose drive in the second inning triggered a 4-0 St. Louis victory.

Hernandez' blow, his first homer since June 21, helped decided a pitching duel between the 6-foot-8 Richard, 9-7, and Cards right-hander Bob Forsch, 12-4, who walked five but permitted only three Astros hits.

"I don't know what it was. Sometimes I was standing out there and I just didn't feel good," said Forsch. "I guess I just wasn't concentrating. I wanted to keep them off the bases, because they're a pretty good running team."

Forsch, relying on a lively fast ball, held Houston hitless until former teammate Jose Cruz sliced a double with two out in the fourth inning.

Meanwhile Hernandez' blast represented the only St. Louis hit until Garry Templeton singled, stole second base and scored on two grounders in the Cards' fourth.

Forsch became Richard's sixth strikeout victim to start the sixth but Jerry Mumphrey followed with a single and also swiped second.

"I was happy to get them," conceded Simmons of the RBI, which boosted his season's total to 61. "J. R. was throwing everything."

The shutout was the seventh of his career for Forsch, who also permitted singles by Cruz and Enos Cabell in the sixth and eighth innings en route to his fifth complete game.

"Both of them pitched good," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon in evaluating the performances of Richard, who entered the game with a streak of 22 1-3 scoreless innings, and Forsch.

"Forsch pitched better, I guess," said Virdon. "He was better than at any time before we've seen him."

Cowens helps beat Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Al Cowens was ignored when it came to picking American League All Stars.

But the Kansas City outfielder was hard to ignore Thursday night at Tiger Stadium — as was the pitching of Paul Splittorff.

Cowens went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs, while Splittorff fired a four-hitter, leading the Royals to an 8-1 drubbing of Detroit.

"I would rather play in a World Series than an All-Star game, anyway," said Cowens, who raised his batting average seven points to .311, his home run count to 15 and his runs-batted-in total to a career-high 63.

The victory was the seventh consecutive for Kansas City, which has won 12 of its last 14 and 24 of 31. The second-place Royals moved to within two games of idle Chicago in the West Division.

"There's no doubt in my mind we'll catch Chicago," Cowens said matter-of-factly.

The sixth-place Tigers are 12 games out of first in the East heading into tonight's rematch. They're scheduled to send hard-luck pitcher Fernando Arroyo (5-9) against hot Royals starter Dennis Leonard (9-9) — who has won five of his last six starts. He has a 1.58 earned-run-average over the span.

Splittorff gave up a pair of singles in the third inning, then just two bunt singles the rest of the way as he posted only his third complete game in 22 starts.

He got all the runs he needed in the second inning when John Mayberry followed Cowens' leadoff single with his 15th homer of the year, a towering drive into the upper deck in right field.

Cowens added his 15th of the season in the next inning off starter Dave Roberts, 5-9, after an RBI double by Hal McRae.

Cowens singled in one run in the fifth and two in the sixth off Steve Grilli, giving him the first five-RBI game of his major league career.

"I don't know what kind of year I'm capable of having," the soft-spoken Cowens said.

Tiger Manager Ralph Houk didn't quite know how to assess what went wrong with Roberts, who hasn't won in his last six starts.

Detroit's lone run was unearned, thanks ironically to rightfielder Cowens in the third. He lost a Ron LeFlore fly ball in the lights for an error, sandwiched between singles by Tom Veryzer and Tito Fuentes.

Hrabosky gets his way

Rapp gets new contract

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Reliever Al Hrabosky says a lengthy discussion with St. Louis Cardinals Manager Vern Rapp may have paid dividends after all.

While the Cards' pilot at first seemed unwilling to back off, the exchange last week paved the way to the relaxation Thursday of a rule prohibiting Hrabosky's flamboyant mustache and beard.

An announcement of the rules modification was contained in a statement club board chairman August A. Busch Jr., presented Hrabosky and later read at a news conference.

At the same time, Busch backed his manager with a vote of confidence by extending his one-year contract through the 1978 season.

"Vern has my utmost confidence and that of Bing Devine (executive vice president)," said Busch. "With all the troubles he's been having, he still has a contending club."

Busch, while reading the statement he had presented Hrabosky, noted, "You said in the newspaper that you can only get batters out by being psyched out with your mustache and beard.

"Then go ahead and grow it but, boy, are you going to look like a fool if you don't get batters out," the statement said.

"By taking this course of action to make you happy, we will have the great Al Hrabosky defying everyone, saying to his teammates, 'I'm more important than you.' To me this is childish, and I hope you see it that way."

Busch, who was flanked at the news conference by Rapp and Devine, said the decision to modify the rule was effective immediately and pertained to all team players.

"They (beards and mustaches) are allowed for the balance of the season," said the 78-year-old club owner. "We will examine the situation after the season and decide on next year."

That breach was sealed through a club meeting but opened anew in mid-May when Hrabosky, after refusing to meet with Rapp, was suspended for 48 hours.

Hrabosky said the final showdown between himself and his manager began building up after the two met in Philadelphia last week.

Bi-State season coming to close

A non-league game scheduled for tonight between the Cape Capahas and Sikeston Saints at Capaha Park has been cancelled by mutual consent. Both teams will be involved in the Bi-State League playoffs next week and both need to wrap up their league seasons this weekend.

"We've got that doubleheader on Sunday," a Sikeston team spokesman pointed out. "Then there's a game Monday at VFW and Wednesday on the road and possibly the league playoffs starting in between. Both sides decided it would be easier on the pitching not to play."

Sikeston hosts Perryville Sunday afternoon in a 1 p.m. doubleheader to finish the league season. Scheduled starting pitchers are tentatively Glen Alexander (4-1) in the nine-inning first game and Ricky Taylor (2-0) in the seven-inning nightcap.

A double win would enable the Sikeston squad to better last year's 11-9 record (they're 10-8 now) and finish second for the second straight year. Although league standings are not official until all teams have completed and reported their games, a 12-8 finish would reportedly tie Sikeston with Anna for the runnerup spot.

Goff unusual athlete

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) — Talk not of money hungry athletes when discussing former University of Georgia quarterback Ray Goff.

Goff gave the Denver Broncos a $1,000 refund when it became apparent that he was not going to make the National Football League team.

"My dad always taught me not to take things for nothing," Goff said. "A lot of people think I'm crazy to give that much money back. But I didn't go up there looking for something free. I didn't do anything to earn a $1,000."

So now he is back in Moultrie—with a gas station he and a friend opened this week—and planning to help coach the Georgia football teams this year.

Goff led the Bulldogs to 9-3 and 10-2 seasons the last two years, but he was a running quarterback and not noted for his passing. Thus he was ignored in the NFL draft and made it to Denver as a free agent, signing for the standard $1,000 free agent bonus.

After five days in the Broncos' training camp, it became apparent that his passing was not up to NFL standards. Denver's coaches told him to work on his passing or try and make the team as a defensive back.

Grimsley's Sports World

Being Reggie Jackson is tough job

Good looking, intelligent, articulate and rich, Jackson should have the key to this city. Instead he is being locked out. The fans boo him, his teammates don't understand him and his manager wants to punch him.

Insulted at home games and taunted on the road, he is a man without a city. As the object of hate wherever he goes, the parallel with Jackie Robinson 30 years ago seems valid.

Robinson was not accepted by many players and fans because he was the first black. In some circles, color has a bearing on why Jackson's fan club does not need a big room for its meetings. But for the average fan who looks at statistics rather than skin, the criticism goes deeper. Jackson is not playing or acting like a $2.9 million player.

It is that simple.

"Nine out of 10 guys would love his statistics," said Sal Bando of Milwaukee, Jackson's friend dating back to their championship days in Oakland. "I wouldn't sell him short. With all the pressure he's under, I think he's having an outstanding year."

Bando, a free agent, signed in mellow Milwaukee, the center of middle America. Expectations run lower there, and Bando, who signed a $1.4 million contract for five years, says he has not been booed at home—even though he has had his troubles at the plate.

Jackson, batting .286 with 16 home runs, 50 runs batted in and a team-leading nine game-winning hits, was the only Yankee booed in Thursday night's doubleheader with the Brewers. He has now come to accept negativism from the fans.

The low point may have come Tuesday night. Booed in his own ballpark in the All-Star Game, Jackson tried winning over the fans—as he often does—by signing autographs late into the night. Weary and mentally drained, Jackson excused himself from the autograph session.

Jackson, who was with his parents and girl friend, then was subjected to a stream of profanities from some of the kids. Jackson couldn't take it anymore. He chased one 13-year-old, but never caught him, he said.

The teen-ager claimed he was roughed up by Jackson, a charge that has been refuted by several eyewitnesses. A good deed by Jackson had turned into another nightmare.

But Jackson hasn't been entirely blameless. In his first season with the American League champions, Jackson was quoted in Sport magazine as saying only he could be the team leader, not Thurman Munson, last year's Most Valuable Player in the AL and the team captain.

"The Munson article was out of bounds," Jackson now admits. "Everything else I have done, I would do the same."

That apparently includes the time he hit a home run and refused to shake his teammates' hands. And last month, Yankees Manager Billy Martin and Jackson had words, then almost got into a fight during a nationally televised game in Boston.

Trevino predicts lead won't stand

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino was the first to predict that his first-round lead in the $225,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship would not stand up.

"It's like my little boy said," Trevino quoted. "There's two things that won't last: a dog that chases cars and a pro that misses greens."

Trevino missed more than his share of greens Thursday, but he saved things with what he called "the best putting round I've ever had.

"In all the years I've played golf, and I've played golf for a lot of years in a lot of tournaments, that's the best putting round I've ever had.

"I didn't shoot 67. I putted 67. From where I hit the ball, I should have had about a 72. And it would have been a good 72, not an easy one.

"I've got to start hitting the ball better if I hope to do anything."

Trevino, trying to rebuild his game following major back surgery last winter, one-putted 11 times and once holed a 45-footer to save par on his way to the five-under-par effort that put him one stroke in front of nine players tied at 68.

Heading that group was Jack Nicklaus, designed of the tough, hilly, leg-straining 7,090-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course that is being played for the first time and will be a permanent site for this national championship.

Nicklaus, who has yet to win the Canadian title, shared the No. 2 spot with Bruce Lietzke and Tom Purtzer, each of whom had two eagles on his back nine, George Archer, Tom Kite, Mike Morley, George Cadle, Jimmy Wittenberg and rookie Jeff Mitchell.

Trevino, whose rags-to-riches saga includes five major championships and a blitz of the American, British and Canadian national titles in 1971, has had to restructure his game following the surgery. And he hasn't won in more than a year.

Softball tourney continues

Steward Steel and Poplar Bluff were tied 5-5 when a run scored on a fielder's choice in the top of the fourth. Relief pitcher Vernie Deene, who got the win, drove in an insurance run in the fifth inning with a single.

Tonight there are three games on tap at the complex: Charleston opposes Bank of Sikeston, starting at 6:30 p.m. The 8 o'clock game pits Security National Bank against the SFPSL '77 champion Eagles team. And, at 9:30 Dexter will take on Eby's.

The Benton Aces whipped Purkey's Restaurant 4-2 and Steward Steel held off Poplar Bluff in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Tournament being held at the Sikeston Sports Complex. Purkey's and Poplar Bluff go into the loser's brack of the double elimination tournament because of the losses.

Larry Steimle picked up the Benton win with a four-hitter in the first game. Dale Lane had the biggest Purkey's hit, a double. The winning Benton team could only manage five hits, but bunched them together for the four runs.

Denny stays on disabled list indefinitely

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Right-handed pitcher John Denny, injured June 21 during a game at Los Angeles, will remain on the St. Louis Cardinals' disabled list for an indefinite period, the National League club said Thursday night.

The 6-foot-3 Denny, who has a 7-2 record, suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his left leg. He was placed on the 21-day disabled list four days later.

Atkinson trial to jury

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A six-person federal court jury was expected to start deliberation today of George Atkinson's $2 million slander suit against the Pittsburgh Steelers and their coach, Chuck Noll.

On Thursday, the jury was told there was no doubt Noll was trying to damage Atkinson when he linked the Oakland Raiders' veteran defensive back to a "criminal element" in professional football.

"Mr. Noll was nobody's dummy," attorney Willie Brown said in final arguments. "He knew what he was saying. There is no question he had in mind doing serious damage to Mr. Atkinson's reputation. He showed absolute reckless disregard as to what might happen to Mr. Atkinson in his career."

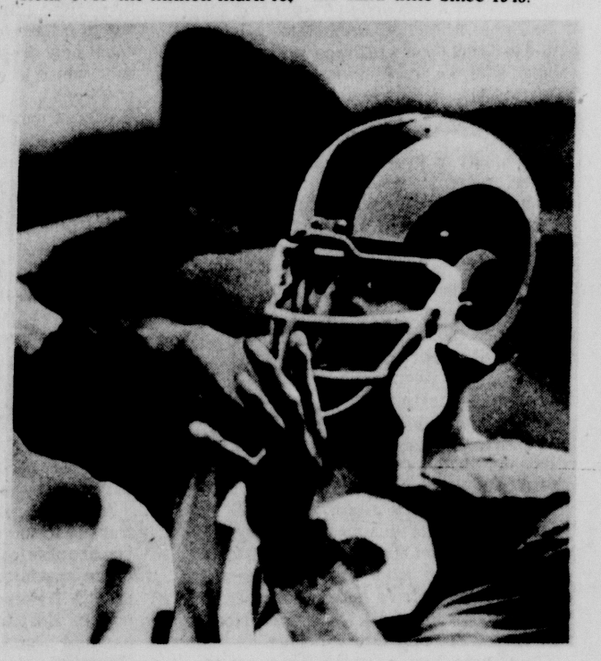
James MacInnis, the Steelers' attorney, said Noll's explanation of what he meant by "criminal element" — those who wantonly break the rules — shows that his words were "aptly applied and correctly used."

Atkinson is seeking a million dollars each from the Steelers and Noll because of remarks the Steelers' coach made following a Steeler-Raider game last September.

Card gate goes over a million

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Paid attendance of 15,743 for a game Thursday night against the Houston Astros boosted St. Louis Cardinals gate admissions over the million mark for the 15th consecutive season.

The Cards, who have played 48 of their 80 home dates, have drawn 1,011,993 fans, pushing them over the million mark for the 22nd time since 1946.



Joe Namath, acquired from the New York Jets two months ago, tries his famed arm as he began the first day of Los Angeles Ram training camp drills at Fullerton, California, Monday. He's recovering from a rib-cage pull, but told newsmen the injury is about 90 percent healed. Namath is 34. (AP Wirephoto)

LL tourney winners advance

Rotary moved into the championship game of the Sikeston Little City Tournament in Musial League as they squeaked past the Daily Standard 6-5. It was a seesaw battle that was tied four of the six innings. The game was finally won as Billy Pennington rapped a base loaded single in the home half of the sixth to drive Stan Templeton home for the winner.

In the second game, Orlando Stewart of Meredith Realty and Brian Self of Collins Construction locked horns in an exciting pitching duel. Meredith did score three in the top of the fourth that gave them enough to win 6-3. Orlando allowed Collins only two hits while Self gave up only four. Stewart got the win which puts Meredith into the championship game against Rotary. Self was visibly tired and didn't have his usual control. This and the lack of key hits made him the loser.

Stan Templeton got his third win in four days for Rotary while Rod Anderson got the loss. At first, it looked like Anderson might be the winner as firstbaseman Dennis Huckaba of the Daily Standard sent a two run homer over the left field fence, the first Musial league home run of the year. However, solid pitching and good fielding eventually allowed Rotary to win.

The two suprise teams of the tournament battled it in American league action as Bridger ripped First National 10-0. David Peridore tossed a one hit shutout for Bridger as well banging out a triple to spark his club. Rusty Crismon got the loss for First National as well as their lone hit.

In the second game, Moore's Firestone beat second place Ryan 8-5. Moore's outhit Ryan 8-5 and a triple by Winner Jamie Cowell provided the necessary power for the upset. Scott Bogle was hung with the loss for Ryan. The loss by Ryan means that the three top teams in the American league will not be in the finals of the tournament.

Pizza Inn is now one game away from a clean sweep as they downed Kiwanis a close one, 3-1. Pizza Inn could manage only three in the second, but it was enough as Todd Baker pitched another fine game. Baker was the winner for Pizza Inn and Brooks Sherman got the loss for the Kiwanis.

Lions continued to score the big run when they needed it as they nipped Security National Bank 7-5. With the score knotted at five in the sixth, Lions got two to take the lead. In the bottom of the sixth, Security loaded the bases and it looked like the game might go into extra innings. With two out, the batter hit a screamer up the middle that had base hit written on it. Shortstop David Braden of Lions mad a great play on the ball and simply stepped on second to end the game. Marland Beaudean was the winner and Dennis Sanders the loser for Security National.

Deaths

William Jackson

EAST PRAIRIE -- Pallbearers at services conducted today for William W. Jackson, 53, who died Wednesday, were Jim Winchester, Phil Barkett, Bobby McTigue, R. H. Cope, Billy Joe Wilkerson and L. F. LaPlant.

Rebecca O'Kelley

PORTAGEVILLE -- Mrs. Rebecca O'Kelley, 70, died Wednesday at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, following an extended illness.

Born Sept. 28, 1906 in Diehlstadt, she was the daughter of the late Frederick L. and Agnes Offritt Miller and was a former social worker for the New Madrid County Welfare Department.

Her husband, Harry H. O'Kelley, died Aug. 2, 1962.

Survivors include one brother, Lewis Miller of Cascade, Idaho, and one sister, Lee Lampe of Sunset Hills.

Services were conducted at 11 a.m. today in First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Bennie Wilsey of Lilbourn officiating.

Iona McPherson

EDGAR SPRINGS -- Iona Jennie McPherson, 70, formerly of Malden, died Wednesday at Phelps County Hospital in Rolla.

She was born June 17, 1907 in Malden to the late Andy and Ida Heck Woods.

On Jan 9, 1930 at Risco, she married Pearl McPherson, who survives.

Other survivors include: five sons, James Prestage of Breckenridge, Mich., Cecil and Carl McPherson of Brant, Mich., Sherman McPherson of Edgar Springs and Douglas McPherson of Malden; one daughter, Mary Nelson of Byron, Mich.; one sister, Pearlene Cagle of Fairdealing; one stepson, William McPherson, address unavailable; and 21 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Friends may call after 7 p.m. today at Bradshaw Funeral Home in Malden, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Sunday with the Rev. Troy Rice officiating.

Burial will follow in Mount Gilead Cemetery at Clarkton.

Ernest C. Byrd

HAYTI – Ernest Clifton Byrd, 73, of 504 S. Fourth St., a retired laborer, died Thursday in Pemiscot Memorial Medical Center.

He was born Oct. 28, 1903 in Illinois to the late Mr. and Mrs. Everett Byrd.

Friends may call at Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Burial will follow in Evergreen Cemetery at New Madrid.

Many Names Dropped In Cassini Book

I'D DO IT ALL OVER AGAIN. By Igor Cassini with Jeanne Molli. Putnam. 266 Pages. $8.95.

What do you do if you're no longer "Cholly Knickerbocker," longtime gossip columnist for the Hearst chain, but still have a lot of famous names to drop?

Igor and his brother, Oleg, were born into an aristocratic Russian family — their grandfather was Czarist ambassador to Washington — but fled the revolution and grew up in Italy, where they were both tennis champs.

Arriving in the United States, the two young Counts Cassini made names for themselves in different fields. Oleg, who was for a time married to film star Gene Tierney, became a designer, eventually creating clothes for First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy.

The book is full of inside stories of the famous and notorious but it's sometimes difficult to keep track of who was married to whom — when. So many names are dropped, in fact, that the index covers 10 pages.

BY MAXINE NEECE

My Sister and I were very close to each other and shared many things of beauty both natural and spiritual but the spiritual remain foremost in my mind. For she was a person who truly walked with God and out of her inner-most being flowed rivers of life. Those whoknew her after the knew Jesus Christ, for he ...ibited her very being. There was an aroura about her and she glowed with a light from within.

One of her favorite scriptures as Matthew Chapter 13 where Jesus told the parable of the sower and then He said, "He who has ears to hear, let him be listening and consider and perceive and comprehend by hearing what the Spirit is saying"

My Sister's Life was a parable-she died that those she loved might have their eyes opened to see and their ears opened to hear the mysteries of God. For with the opening of the eyes we gain understanding and with the opening of the ears we gain knowledge and when knowledge and understanding come together they bring wisdom to the heart of man. And when wisdom has done a perfect work God will rule and reign in the hearts of men.

What is God? or Who is God? Many man ask in their blindness but when their eyes and ears are opened they begin to see; God is Love, and Joy and Peace and Wisdom and Knowledge and Understanding and all the Beauty a heart could ever imagin.

Helen's husband was a farmer. He broke up the hardened ground year after year and planted seeds which died in the earth to bring forth life in the time of harvest.

Helen was also a sower of the seeds of life. Everywhere she went she sowed seeds-some fell by the roadside, some fell on rocky ground, some fell among thorns, but some fell on good soil and will yield a harvest.

If you have eyes to see and ears to hear you will understand -"She died that hardened hearts might be broken so that the seeds of life might take root and grow in each of you who loved her and whom she loved".

Her life was not in vain, neither was her death in vain; For it was a parable of sowing and reaping. Jesus said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit.

Her life has been sown as a seed in the ground and great will be the Harvest.

not with the stink," said George Finley, 55, a welfare father of five, whose trailer home in nearby Huff was washed away.

"What are you supposed to do when you lose everything and you didn't have nothinv to start with?" asked his wife Alberta as she packed the children in an old blue station wagon for the ride to a friend's home.

While some people packed, state troopers used billy clubs to poke for bodies in waist-high mud the consistency of pudding in nearby Seward, where water washed away as many as 50 mobile homes.

A relief center in Armagh listed two dozen persons missing in Seward, and the list was growing.

Another 25 persons were reported missing in West Taylor Township where an earthen dam burst and washed away at least 10 homes as neighbors watched in horror.

"I was in the Second World War, in Korea and in 'Nam," said Bethlehem Steel Corp. machinist Rudy Dragovich, 52, as he looked over the small shattered town below broken Laurel Run Dam.

"But watching my friends die, that seemed like the worst war of all."

Sporadic communication continued to hamper efforts to locate missing persons, and Gov. Milton Shapp, after a tour, ordered the National Guard to install manned radio units at all 11 mass care center.

Blood drive hours are from noon until 6 p.m. and parking will be available behind the nurse's residence and in the parking lot of the First Christian Church. Signs will be posted to direct donors to the parking areas.

Jones said the blood-giving process will take from 30 to 45 minutes and there will be adequate personnel at the station to handle all donors.

"It's a gift of love from one person to another," he remarked.

Under the Red Cross program, persons being treated at one of the hospitals in the region must pay only the administrative cost of receiving the blood. The Red Cross will make arrangements to replace units of blood used to treat patients living in its region in a non-member hospital if the hospital will accept the blood.

Although the Red Cross would probably not withdraw its 'blood supplies from the hospital if the obligation of the community is not met, the people of the area have a responsibility to put their share of blood back into the system, Jones said.

"Whatever blood is used bythe people in Southeast Missouri must be supplied by the people in Southeast Missouri," Jones said.

Dr. Rosenstein says first-time donors, which any blood drive hopes to attract in addition to persons who have given blood before, tend to be hesitant to donate.

While some care must be taken not to over-exert yourself following a blood donation, Dr. Rosenstein said the body has its own system for replacing the blood donated and problems seldom arise.

The body will replace the blood volume within 24 hours of a donation. The red cells take more time and are usually replaced within a five-week period. The hemoglobin count only drops to about eight per cent, he said, which is not low enough to present any problems.

When a donor enters the donor station, he registers, giving data about himself. An interview follows in which the donor's medical history is recorded and he is then taken to the examination area where his blood pressure, pulse and other items are checked.

The actual withdrawal of blood takes from five to 10 minutes and is done by registered nurses trained by the Red Cross. This is followed by a short rest period on the table and then the donor receives some type of fluid as a refreshment.

Some persons, such as anyone who has had hepatitis, or has severe heart disease, are ineligible to give blood. Anyone 17-years-old needs the written consent of parents to be a donor.

A general rule to follow is that if you are from 17 to 65 years old and in good health, you are able to give blood.

The special blood drive is a community project endorsed by Missouri Delta Community Hospital. Jones says the hospital has had a much more effective system of obtaining blood under the Red Cross Program and says blood from commercial banks tends to have a higher incidence of hepatitis.

Liquor division barred from grocery game ban

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A temporary injunction was issued today prohibiting the state Division of Liquor Control from penalizing food markets with liquor licenses because they are operating bingo-type games for their customers.

Judge James Riley of the Cole County Circuit Court said in the order that based on petitions from attorneys for more than 200 grocery stores and four hours of court testimony last week, he found that the markets "would suffer irreparable harm, loss and damage if this temporary injunction were not issued."

The order means that the stores can continue operating the games without fear of having their liquor licenses suspended or revoked until further action is taken by the court.

Judge Riley set no date for a full hearing on whether to make the order permanent.

Liquor Control Supervisor Albert Letz had advised the stores in June to halt the game because he believed operation of it could violate two liquor regulations. One prohibits operation of lotteries by businesses licensed to sell liquor and the other prohibits advertising promotions in conjunction with advertisements for liquor.

At the hearing last Friday, Letz testified that based on the investigations his office has already made, he feels the games do violate those regulations. Violations would subject the stores to either suspension or revocation of their liquor licenses.

But attorneys for the stores and the company that developed the games, claiming they had received assurances from the state earlier this year that the games were legal, said none of the advertisements for the bingo games ever included ads for liquor and that the game did not constitute a lottery.

They also said grocery store officials had attempted to revise some provisions of the advertisements to meet objections of state officials.

If Letz were allowed to penalize the stores, food market officials have said they would halt the games, costing them not only more than $250,000 but also the good will of their customers.

1. Where is the safest place in a house during a tornado alert?
2. Gasoline and flammable liquids can safely be stored in your house, even in a safety can.
☐ True ☐ False

ANSWERS

1. The basement offers the greatest safety. In houses without basements, protection should be sought in the center part of the structure on the lowest floor. Keep windows wide open, but stay away from them. A small interior room, such as a bathroom or closet, may be best.
2. False. Gasoline and flammable liquids should never be stored in your house, but away from living quarters in a cool, well-ventilated area in a UL Listed container — keep away from children, as well. Provided as a public safety service by Underwriters Laboratories

Doctors develop heart gauge

COLUMBIA -- Doctors at the University of Missouri-Columbia Medical Center and Truman Veterans Hospital are helping develop a new method of gauging a heart's pumping action. The method could determine whether a heart attack victim needs surgery. In the next two or three years, doctors say it could replace conventional cardiac catheterization techniques.

This new process, known as Gated Cardia Blood Pool Imaging (GCBPI), involves injecting radioactive dye into a vein in a patient's arm. The blood flow carries the dye into the heart. Doctors can then use a computerized machine similar to a Geiger counter to determine how efficiently the heart pumps blood to other parts of the body.

In catheterization, dye is injected into the heart itself by a hollow tube that is threaded through an artery into the heart.

"Several research projects have gone into developing this new process," said Dr. Masood Ahmad, a cardiologist at Truman Veterans Hospital. "No one person is responsible for developing it. We're looking for a noninvasive method of measuring heart patterns that would replace heart catheterization." Research to help perfect the process is supported by funds from the Missouri Heart Association.

Dr. Ahmad told a group of 40 Heart Association fund-raising volunteers at their annual meeting in Columbia in June that GCBPI has several potential benefits over cardiac catheterization. The patient is not exposed to the discomfort and risk of minor surgery, and also receives less radiation. It is less costly and more convenient for the patient since this method does require him to be hospitalized.

GCBPI has potential applications in all areas of cardiac diagnosis. But cardiologists are hopeful that it will play a major role in the diagnosis of a ventricular aneurysm and its severity. An aneurysm is a bulging out of the heart muscle wall, caused when scar tissue that forms following a major heart attack is not strong enough to resist the pressure within the heart. The heart with an aneurysm may become inefficient at pumping blood. Blood that normally would be pushed into arteries backs up into the lungs. The lungs then become congested, causing the patient to become short of breath.

About 20 per cent of heart attack patients develop aneurysms, but most do not cause problems that are serious enough to be corrected surgically. And not all patientts who are operated on for aneurysms benefit from the operation. A procedure developed in 1975 by Medical Center cardiologists allows physicians to be selective as to which patients will benefit from surgery. By measuring the volume of blood in the aneurysm, and that pumped by the remainder of the heart, the function of the heart after the aneurysm has been removed can be predicted. Heart catheterization and X-ray techniques are required for this procedure, which is now used in many medical centers around the country. Medical Center cardiologists hope that the GCBPI process may replace cardiac catheterization in the exploration of ventricular aneurysms.

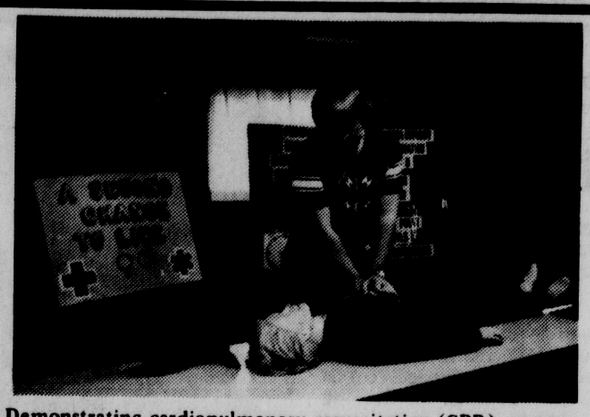
Cardia care facilities at the Vaterans Hospital and the Medical Center were toured by the Heart Association volunteers, as they followed the case history of a man who had undergone surgical treatment for ventricular aneurysms at the Medical Center in November, 1975.

Russell Metzger, a 75-year-old farmer from Moberly, had a massive heart attack in February, 1975, and three months later, developed two large aneurysms on the left side of his heart. Using the method developed at the Medical Center, in doctors found that he would benefit from removal of the aneurysms, and that one of the aneurysms was of a very rare type which was about to rupture.

"I think I'm a pretty lucky old boy to be alive today," Metzger said at the Heart Association meeting. "I'm on top of the world."

In the future, the medical center and Veterans Hospital cardiologists hope that many persons like Metzger will benefit from the measurement of heart volume and from the GCBPI process.

"Behind advances like these which have been developed here are years of basic research by many investigators," Dr. Richard Martin, director of the division of cardiology and Metzger's cardiologist at the Medical Center, told the Heart Association volunteers. "Without the knowledge obtained from basic research over the years, we would not have the practical applications which you have seen here today."



Demonstrating cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), an emergency lifesaving procedure, on life-size manikin is Jim Castelaw of Griffin, Ga., a 1975 national winner in the 4-H health program supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, gives 4-H members opportunities to learn CPR and other practical self-help skills.

Bad security system makes fraud possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security for a nationwide communications system linked to government computers is so poor that a private insurance company could file false claims for federal welfare checks and go undetected, federal auditors say.

Thirty-three federal agencies have 2,190 terminals on the Advanced Record System, which auditors from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said has serious weaknesses.

"Security procedures and controls over data transmitted through the ARS network need to be strengthened to prevent use of the system for unauthorized purposes," an audit said.

The communications system, run by the General Services Administration, receives messages from agencies' terminals and sends them to their proper designations.

For instance, a claim for Supplemental Security Income, federal welfare for the aged, is filed at a local Social Security office. The request for payment would be typed on a terminal and transmitted to the computer system, which in turn would send it to the Social Security computer in Baltimore.

But the system cannot tell which terminal is sending a message. A deliberate attempt to disguise a terminal's identity can succeed.

The auditors used a terminal in Washington, but not a Social Security terminal, to test the system with requests for Supplemental Security Income claims directed at the main Social Security computer.

"We found that the SSA computer rejected the messages when the sending terminal's (codes) were used. However, when the (codes) of an SSA field office were used, the message was accepted and the ... claim was established and processed for payment," the audit said.

The audit, released by Reps. John Moss, D-Calif., and Charles R,se, D-N.C., did not say fraudulent claims had been entered in this manner, only that it could be done.

The Social Security Administration said in response on the audit that its procedures should prevent issuance of checks based on such false entries. But the agency admitted its procedures are not foolproof.

The agency is the largest user of the system, employing about 1,200 terminals for Social Security, SSI, Medicare and other programs.

Some private insurance companies which help administer Medicare at the state level have terminals hooked to the system.

The Social Security Administration said it is trying to plug the holes in the system.

Taking A Substitute

For those mildly interested in Las Vegas but with no great desire to go to the neon city to satisfy that yen, Mario Puzo's "Inside Las Vegas" ought to prove a satisfactory substitute.

Puzo, author of the best-selling "The Godfather," tells in chatty, relaxed, anecdote-loaded prose everything anyone could possibly want to know about Las Vegas and his text is reinforced as well as envlivened by an abundance of photographs — both in black and white and in color — that are largely excellent.

Starting out as a dusty little town with little to recommend it, as Puzo tells it, Las Vegas has had an amazing growth in recent years due, of course, to the fact that it has legalized gambling. There is, says Puzo, no other reason for its existence. "It is a desert in the middle of nowhere. It has no virtues of climate or natural resources. It has no ancient history or scenery to beguile the tourist," And yet, "In 1975 over nine million people visited Las Vegas."

Why all these people went to Las Vegas is one part of Puzo's narrative. Acting as counterpoint, is Puzo's description of the people who live in Las Vegas and earn their living from the money left in the area by the visitors.

4-H'ers Master CPR: 'Second Chance To Live'

CHICAGO—More than 650,000 Americans die suddenly each year of heart attacks, choking, poisoning, drowning, smoke inhalation or other causes. For some of these victims, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) might have meant a "second chance to live."

CPR is an emergency lifesaving procedure performed by an individual to provide artificial breathing and blood circulation for a person whose own breathing mechanism and heart have stopped.

4-H members who are about 14 years of age or older and of sufficient size and ability may be able to learn CPR techniques from a qualified instructor at 4-H camps, during club meetings or in other 4-H activities.

CPR is one of several self-help skills emphasized in the national 4-H health program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program gives 4-H'ers learn-by-doing opportunities to develop skills in first aid, exercise, diet and nutrition, disease prevention and control, and eye, dental and foot care.

Projects and activities also encourage an understanding of health-related environmental issues, such as pollution and sanitation control, and stimulate young people 9-19 to broaden their outlook by making contact with members of other generations. 4-H'ers discover where community health facilities are located, what services they provide and when to seek the services of a health care professional.

For outstanding accomplishments by health program members, Eli Lilly offers awards ranging from seven $800 scholarships at the national level to four medals of honor per county. One boy or girl in each state receives an expense-paid trip to the 56th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 1.

Winners are chosen by the Extension Service, and awards are arranged and announced by National 4-H Council. More information on the program is available from county extension agents.

Slavin term on PSC could be short-lived

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Consumr advocate Alberta Slavin could wind up serving one of the shortest terms in recent years as a member of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Gov. Joseph Teasdale named Mrs. Slavin to the $28,000-a-year post July 8, and she began her tenure on the five-member commission July 13.

However, her controversial appointment will come up for confirmation by the Missouri Senate at the scheduled special legisltive session Aug. 10, which Teasdale called last week to settle the deadlock over a new state prison.

The 47-year-old St. Louis County housewife and mother of four is expected to face tough opposition in the Senate, where several senators have said she is too anti-utility.

Although Teadale has declined to say he was confident she would be confirmed, the governor has pledged to fight for her confirmation.

For her part, Mrs. Slavin has said she was prepared for Senate rejection, but would "do my duty as I see it," despite the open hostility of some of the senators.

But as the situation was summed up by Senate Majority Leader John Schneider, D-St. Louis: "She's either approved during this special session or that's it."

Schneider pointed to the already announced opposition from several senators and said Mrs. Slavin faced a couple of hurdles before the full chamber would even take a final vote on her appointment.

"Her first step is the Gubernatorial Appointments Committee," said Schneider, adding that the committee's approval was an essential ingredient for final Senate approval.

Along with that, Mrs. Slavin must also have a senator sponsor her appointment, which is a traditional Senate courtesy.

"Her appointment could die for lack of a sponsor," Schneider added.

Republican Sen. A. Clifford Jones of Ladue has suggested Mrs. Slavin's appointment could come to the Senate floor for a full vote without the Appointment Committee's okay.

The senators could take care of her appointment in much the same way as they handled the 1975 nomination of Rodney Miller to the commission by former Gov. Christopher Bond. In that instance, the appointments panel turned down Bond's choice of Miller, but the committee sent the matter to the floor, where the Seanate later rejected it.

Some senators have raised questions about Mrs. Slavin's initial plans to continue living at her Clayton home, which is in Jones' district, and commute to Jefferson City for her PSC job.

Traditionally, the senator in whose district the appointee resides sponsors the appointment before the Senate, but Jones said he was opposed to Mrs. Slavin serving on the commission.

"But I would vote against her," he added. "I have never voted for a utility hater or a utility lover."

Jones said under state law, a commissioner must live in Jefferson City, so he considered the matter "all up in the air" until Mrs. Slavin's residency was settled.

She is currently looking for a residence in the capital city.

However, Sen. Ralph Uthlaut, R-New Florence, whose district includes Jefferson City, said he was against Mrs. Slavin's appointment to the PSC.

Uthlaut said the public service commissioners were not selected so they could serve as "to champion a cause or crusade."

Even though Uthlaut said he opposed her appointment, he said "I'm not saying I would not sponsor her."

Dedication service set for Christian Center

A dedication service for Sikesotn Christian Center, 210 E. Center St., will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The service will feature music by the Gospel Tones and a dedication sermon by an as yet unannounced guest speaker.

Sikeston Christian Center is a new meeting place where youth of the area can congregate for fun, fellowship and Christian guidance.

The center came into being last month through the efforts of several concerned adults interested in seeing that the youth of the community have a place to meet in a Christian atmosphere. One side of a former store building was rented and refurnished, and John Braddock was hired as a counselor to supervise the center.

In addition to providing a meeting place for games and recreation, the center hosts a weekly praise service at 7:30 each Thursday evening featuring music groups and guest speakers.

Couple to lead revival

The Rev. Stan and Sherry Welch of Eminence will be the evangelists for revival services to be conducted at 7:30 each evening Sunday through July 31 at the Morehouse Assembly of God Church, the Rev. R. A. McAnulty, pastor, has announced.

LCMS action may split ALC ties

DALLAS (AP) — Action taken by delegates to the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod here will probably lead to a split with its sister denomination, the American Lutheran Church (ALC), according to an ALC official.

"It seems almost inevitable that there will be a total split," said Herb David, a lay official from Minneapolis.

The Missouri Synod convention, which runs through Friday, voted Tuesday to declare a state of "fellowship in protest" with the ALC.

The resolution allows the 2.8 million-member Missouri Synod Lutherans to exchange pulpits with the ALC and participate in ALC communion, but it calls for a panel to report to the next convention for reconsideration of the fellowship status. The two Lutheran bodies entered into fellowship in 1969.

The resolution specifies doctrinal disagreement with the ALC in the areas of Scripture interpretation, ordination of women, nature and basis of fellowship and participation in ecumenical functions.

David said the ALC feels there is room for some diversity in fellowship. He noted that ordination of women in the ALC has progressed "quietly" with a minimum of in-house squabbling.

The Missouri Synod calls for agreement in doctrine and practice before it can enter into fellowship, said the Rev. Sam Naszger, executive secretary of the committee that proposed the protest resolution.

However, Dr. Arnold Nickelson, general secretary of the ALC, said his demonimation calls only for belief in the Bible and the Lutheran confessions as fellowship prerequisites.

Successor to Helmsing named

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The appointment of the Most Rev. John J. Sullivan as bishop of the Kansas City-St. Joseph Catholic Diocese was announced today by the Vatican, the diocesan office in Kansas City reported.

Bishop Sullivan, 57, is a native of Horton, Kan., who spent most of his church career in Oklahoma. He has been head of the Grand Island, Neb., diocese the past five years.

He succeeds the Most Rev. Charles Helmsing, whose resignation was accepted last week. Bishop Helmsing, 69, said he asked in November to be relieved as head of the diocese for health reasons.

Evangelist returns to Calvary Assembly

Evangelist Red Dixon of Downing, Calif., will return to Calvary Assembly this weekend for two services only, according to Pastor T. A. McDonough.

The Rev. Mr. Dixon recently conducted a successful four-week crusade at the church, during which many people accepted Christ, and numerous others rededicated their lives to the Lord. He was joined during the crusade by his children who are active in evangelistic work, and is expected to be accompanied on this visit by his two unmarried children, Renee and Greg.

Calvary Assembly is located at the corner of Scott and Trotter streets. Sunday's services will include Sunday School at 9:30 a.m. and worship services at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. A nursery is provided for each service.

1st Baptist VBS to include adults

Vacation Bible School will be conducted next week at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St., and this year Bible classes for adults will be included for the first time.

The Bible school will open Monday and close Friday, with sessions scheduled from 6:30 to 8:30 each evening. In addition to adults, classes will be offered for children from age 3 through sixth grade.

Bible study, missions emphasis, character building and other activities are planned for the children, and refreshments will be served.

Murray Lane plans Disciple Now event

Disciple Now, an intensive program designed to teach youth what it means to be a disciple of Jesus Christ, will be presented July 28-31 at Murray Lane Baptist Church, 807 W. Murray Lane.

The four-night program will begin with a fellowship-study time at 9 p.m. Thursday. Beginning Friday, groups of six to eight young people will enter designated homes at 7 p.m. for programs which will continue in the homes through Sunday evening.

Revival series set at Vanduser church

VANDUSER -- Revival services will begin Sunday and continue each evening through July 31 at the Vanduser Baptist Church, according to the Rev. Lawrence Ray, pastor. The services will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. on weekdays.

The evangelist will be the Rev. Lee Fansler, pastor of First Baptist Church in Bertrand. Mike Parker of Sikeston will be the song leader.

Nursery care will be provided for all services.

Galileans to sing in Charleston church

Charleston -- The Galileans of Dallas, Tex. will present a gospel concert at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Charleston Church of the Nazarene, 718 Thorn St.

The Galileans devote full time to their gospel music ministry. They have traveled with the Happy Goodman family and have appeared on the award winning "Gospel Singing Jubilee".

The concert is open to the public.

No admission will be charged, but a "free will" offering will be taken.

Don Glover to conduct gospel meetings in Essex

ESSEX -- Don Glover of Monroe, La., a former minister of Shady Acres Church of Christ at Sikeston, will be the evangelist for a series of gospel meetings to be conducted Monday through July 31 at the Essex Church of Christ.

The meetings will begin at 8 p.m. on weekdays and 9:50 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday, Norman Atchley, local minister, has announced.

Bob Pipes

Morley church to host gospel meeting series

MORLEY -- A series of gospel meetings will be conducted July 28-31 at the Church of Christ. The meetings will begin at 7:30 on weekday evenings and at 10:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Bob Pipes of Rolla will be the evangelist.

Lilbourn church to Host Bible school next week

LILBOURN -- "Lord Jesus, Teach Me" is the theme of the program prepared by the First Church of God, teachers and workers for Vacation Bible School classes next Monday through Friday.

Classes will be offered for all ages from beginners (ages 4-5) through sr., youth, and will meet from 7 to 9 o'clock each evening.

Bible learning, Bible-related crafts, singing, refreshments, games and many more, are planned. Also, some of the Sesame Street puppets will be featured.

For free transportation on the church bus, call telephone number 688-2428 or 688-2984.

WHAT IS GOD LIKE?

Dear Mr. Swaim, I have often wondered what God is really like. True, some of his qualities are revealed in the Bible, but I wish I could have a more complete knowledge of His nature.

Some people say that all we can know about God is that He is absolute. Others say God is the expression that is in nature and in life. Still, others indicate that God is the original force who started things, and that through a process of evolution, we have what we do today. These and other philosophies concerning God have been expressed again and again. The real problem of trying to define the nature of God is that the attempt itself is limited and God cannot be limited. The Bible teaches that God is a spirit, that He is not bound by fleshy limitations, that He can be everywhere at once. The Bible teaches that God is a person. Such expressions as "God loves, God says, God does, indicate that He has a personality, that He is One who feels things, wishes, desires and has every expression of personality

The Bible also teaches that God is a holy and righteous being, that He cannot lie, that His mercy and justice are perfect. For this reason we can trust Him completely, recognizing that by knowing all there is to know, he can make decisions that are right in the ultimate sense. The Bible also teaches that God is love. Unfortunately, many people have misunderstood this part of God's nature. The love of God indicates that He wants what is best for us and will do whatever He possibly can to insure our happiness and salvation, but we must recognize that God has limited Himself and that He has placed certain restrictions on man and we must fulfill these in order to receive the grace and salvation He provides. It would be impossible to completely describe the nature of God in a brief article. Let me simply say that the Bible is a book written to reveal God to us. If you will take the time to study it and if you will read it, you will come to realize that God's nature is very much like ours: that He possesses in a perfect degree all good qualities which we possess in a lesser degree, and that our real challenge is to become as much like Him as possible, recognizing that to the degree we do, we will find completeness.

Heifer Project thrives where others falter

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — International charities which try to nourish people in starving nations often fight a losing battle, but one group has a method that comes close to providing a perpetual source of food.

When a Heifer Project International plane lands in an underdeveloped country, a herd of cows strolls down the ramp.

The theory is to provide unending sustenance, according to Bill Peck, director of Heifer's Pacific Central Regional Office here. He said farm machinery and equipment may break down, crops may fail, supplies of food and medicine may run out ...

"But cows give milk until they die, provide offspring to keep up the supply and serve as catalysts around which community development can happen."

Heifer's 40-year-history abounds with examples that support Beck's claim. Cattle shipped to the Japanese island of Hokkaido in the early 1960s spawned that country's booming dairy industry, Beck said.

And on a smaller but no less dramatic level, 10 head of cattle flown to a mountain village near Pusan, Korea, several years ago have grown to a herd of 300, triggering construction of a milk products plant that revived the area's economy.

Now a $2.5 million-a-year operation that has sent 58,000 head into 96 countries, Heifer Project International grew out of one clergyman's haunting memory of starving Spanish civil war refugees.

Dan West, who died in 1970 at age 76, said he founded the organization because he could not shake the sight of a young girl dying of tuberculosis who might have been saved had she had enough milk.

That grim symbol of global hunger made him dedicate his life to providing as much of the world as possible with nature's most perfect food.

Children of God cult finds home in Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Children of God have found a new home away from home and a new prophet in his own country — Col. Moammar Khadafy, Libya's deeply religious Moslem president.

Exiles from the cult phenomenon in the United States, some members of the group are receiving moral and material support from Libya in their supervised search for God and fight against drugs, alcohol and the "world's corruption."

Col. Khadafy, who has made the Koran the base of Libyan law, was interested enough in the movement to meet several times with its leaders, to house them for a period, and even to write a song which the "children" have performed throughout the country, and in their communes in other lands.

They now spell his name "Godhafi," to do him special honors and see him as a Christ-like or Mohammed-like figure.

"Do as I do. I pray to God. I'm very happy because I found the road with Allah, Allah, Allah," says the first verse of Khadafy's song. It is addressed to the industrialized nations of the world, and goes on:

"You hate Negros. You do not pray. You are not good. You have lost your way. Your life is falsehood. Without Allah, Allah, Allah."

Although few of the Children of God speak Arabic, their well-kempt, clean-shaven habits have made them something of a hit in Libya with their guitar-strumming and flute-playing band.

They performed recently at an international fair, and give shows at local restaurants, with opening pieces such as "Chukran Allah" (Thank you Allah) and the old U.S. hit, "Bye, Bye, Miss American Pie," which they regard as a theme song for their gradual exodus from the United States, which they have declared doomed.

The movement was started about 1969 by a Californian named David Berg, whom his followers regard as a prophet and call Moses. His "Mo" letters anticipate a violent end to developed nations.

The group, which settled temporarily in Texas, gradually spread elsewhere. They change their names, adopting Scriptural identities, getting support from merchants, parents, street donations and sales of "Mo" letters.

They've appeared at various public places, including the United Nations, dressed in sackcloth, their faces daubed with ashes, symbolizing the coming doom.

They have a French pop musical group, "Les Enfants de Dieu," which has produced several records, and they've recorded commercial cassettes in Brazil. They have discoteques in Rome and Athens and run an antidrug center in Amsterdam.

Berg claims the group has 250,000 converts worldwide, with 5,000 full-time workers in "colonies" proselytizing in 60 countries. But they've run into considerable opposition, including accusations of "brainwashing" in the United States and have been expelled from Lebanon and Madagascar.

"We are the first children's crusade and probably the last one before God's destruction of this wickedly wordly system," says a recent Mo letter, called the "New Nation News."

In recent years, they've increasingly moved away from the industrialized nation's concentrating on Africa and Asia. One of the Libyan-based group, Stephen Bruce Ferguson from Iowa, says:

"This is the land of the future. This is where it's all going to be. You know, the Koran is not much different from the Bible."

Berg, a recluse who never allows himself to be photographed and who now reportedly lives in England, recently met with the Libya's President Khadafy for nine hours, and says they found much in common.

Both ban alcoholic beverages and drugs, claim the poor will inherit the earth and object to pro-Israel Zionists. Wrote Berg of Khadafy:

"There has not been another such worldly political leader in modern times as this young prophet of the seemingly impossible. There has hardly been such a Godly world political leader since the days of his own prophet Mohammed...and the prophets of ancient times, including ...Jesus."

Charismatics claim movement bringing unity to Christianity

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A multitude of about 45,000 "spirit-filled" Protestants and Roman Catholics on Wednesday night sang, prayed and cheered proclamations that God is doing a "new thing" to unite and renew Christianity for a new age.

It was the opening of the first, full-scale ecumenical conference of the nation's charismatic believers. They massed in Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium, lifting their arms skyward in praise of the Lord.

"An astonishing and historic occasion," the Rev. Dr. Howard P. Courtney, a classical Pentecostal leader of Glendale, Calif., told the mixed throng drawn together by a common spiritual experience.

"It is the fulfillment of the mighty flowing power of God. Bringing us all together in these times for the glory, honor and praise of Christ."

Not before in modern history had all three wings of the movement met jointly, including old-line Pentecostals and the "neo-Pentecostals" or charismatics that have surged recently both in main-line Protestantism and Catholicism.

"It is the largest grass-roots ecumenical manifestation in 400 years," declared Catholic theologian Kevin M. Ranaghan of South Bend, Ind., the conference chairman.

From a yellow draped floodlit platform on the football field's 40 yard line he said, "Unity is a here and now reality, growing by leaps and bounds. The Lord has called us to be one people."

Altogether there are now an estimated 10 million charismatics in the United States, about half of them developing in the last decade in established denominations—Lutherans, Episcopalians, Methodists, Catholics, Presbyterians and others.

Exhibiting a fervent spontaneity and expressiveness in faith, they attributed to a "baptism of the Holy Spirit" endowing them with gifts of teaching, healing, evangelical zeal and speaking in unknown tongues.

They trace the phenomenon back to the first Pentecost in anchient Jerusalem, described in Acts II when God was said to have poured out his spirit on people of many nations, uniting them in common understanding.

It's happening again now, various speakers said. "We're seeing the miracle here before our own eyes," declared the Rev. Vinson Synan from Oklahoma City, general secretary of the Pentecostal Holiness Church.

"We are one in the spirit and one in the Lord."

At intervals shouts of "praise the lord" and "Hallelujah" rang out. "How great is our Lord," the crowd sang, swaying and clapping their hands. A huge banner hung at one end of the stadium saying, "Jesus is Lord."

It was a variegated crowd, old and young, a sprinkling of blacks and nuns and priests in religious garb, mostly white people in shirt sleeves, shorts and cotton dresses.

'God and Country' program revitalized

NEW YORK (AP) — In the midst of all the peer pressures, come-on appeals, pop fads and persuasions, "How do you respond? It is your life! What anchor points hold fast?"

That's one of the questions raised for analysis by young people in a newly developed "God and Country" training course of Scouting, U.S.A., aimed at revitalizing the religious dimensions of the movement.

That aspect "had become pretty much a dead letter, in effect, and we're now rebuilding it," said LeRoy W. Nattress Jr. of Chicago, chairman of the national Church Commission on Scouting. "We anticipate a high degree of recouping."

In that effort, religious principles are presented as a stabilizing ground for which a young person can evaluate the mixed, conflicting pressures of the modern environment and make sound decisions shaping his life.

"As you have outgrown childhood ... you are faced with the need to plan, to make decisions," says a training guide. "You also are facing pressures and persuasive arguments which test the values and morality which you accept."

The issue thus becomes whether you cave in, or have a basis for convictions that holds steady, it is pointed out, with the outcome determining whether you fulfill your own selfhood or fall victim to surrounding influences.

That's only one example, however, of the many growing-up issues put before high school-age Explorer Scouts in the advanced phase of the new program, which also includes earlier stages for Cub Scouts (9 and 10 years old) and for scouts (11 to 14).

The new program, unlike its dwindling predecessor, enlists participation both by parents and church counsellors as well as by the youths working to master it.

"It builds supports back in the family, bringing out discussion of questions that parents have been avoiding with their young," says Nattress, 44, an educational psychologist. "It makes for new understanding and restores a link in the family in a time when families are disintegrating all around us."

In 1790, Philadelphia was the largest city in the U.S., with a population of 42,444.

Gallup says U.S. may be in early stage of revival

NEW YORK (AP) — Pollster George Gallup Jr. said today that recent surveys have found mounting evidence that the United States "may be in an early stage of a profound religious revival."

Writing in the June issue of the Journal of Current Social Issues, Gallup said evidence for his suggestion included a rise in church attendance in 1976, for the first time in nearly two decades.

He said his survey showed 42 per cent of Americans attended church or synagogue in a typical week.

"Our surveys also showed church membership to be on the upswing during the year, with about seven in 10 now describing themselves as church members," he wrote.

He said six in 10 persons surveyed now say their religious beliefs are "very important" and he cited as further evidence of revival the considerable interest in what he termed experimental religion, such as mysticism, yoga and transcendental meditation.

He said the evangelical movement appeared to be "providing a powerful thrust" for the current religious revival.

But Gallup said the surveys suggested that America may be only "superficially religious" with religion on the upswing, "while "morality is losing its influence."

He said that while 94 per cent of persons responding to Gallup interviews said they believed in "God, or a universal spirit," only 44 per cent said they had "a great deal of confidence in organized religion."

Carter tells how role as president could be wrong

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Carter once told his Sunday school class that it would have been wrong for him to assume the nation's highest office if " came between him and Gou, · Carter's Sunday school teache..

Fred M. Gregg Jr., formerly of Nashville, is the lay teacher at Carter's Sunday school class at First Baptist Church in Washington. He said class attendance was about 15 when he started teaching last fall. Now, about 135 persons come to class when Carter is there.

Gregg said in an interview that his greatest reward has been the chance to see "what a dedicated, born-again Christian the President is."

"I've heard him pray, when there were only the two of us, and the President would pour out his heart to God and ask God to help him do His will," Gregg said.

The President asked Gregg not to "make any fanfare over me — just let me come in there and be a member of that Sunday school class."

"He told me that he wakes up on Sunday mornings and just can't wait to come to Sunday school," the teacher said, adding that Carter teaches the class when Gregg can not be there.

On one occasion, the President told the class there are many people who, like a rich, young ruler in the Bible, "let something come between him and God."

Gregg quoted Carter as saying, "If becoming President of the United States had come between me and God, it would have been wrong."

Kaintuck features Marty Robbins

BENTON, Ky. -- Marty Robbins, country singing star, and well known gospel groups, The Kingsmen and Jerry & The Singing Goffs, will appear in four concerts this Sunday, at Kaintuck Territory.

Robbins will perform at 2 and 5 pm, and The Kingsmen and Jerry & The Singing Goffs will perform at 12 and 3 pm.

He sings polynesian, Mexican, western, country, and pop. He has written over 400 songs, including "White Sport Coat", "Devil Woman", "Don't Worry", "Big Iron", "You Gave Me a Mountain", "My Woman, My Woman, My Wife", and the classic "El Paso", and has a number of gold records and gold guitar awards to attest to his composing and singing ability.

Robbins has starred in about a dozen movies and has his own television and movie production company, with distribution through Universal Pictures of Hollywood. His television credits include most ot the top shows in television. A few examples are: "The Dean Martin Show", KraftMusic Hall" and "The Johnny Cash Show". He has been the host on several of the "Midnight Special" shows.

He is also a race car driver. Although he only has time to run in about four or five of the big races a year and although he might tell you he only does it as a hobby, he is still consistently among the top 10 finishers. He is respected by the other drivers on the NASCAR circuit, both as a person and as a race driver.

An exciting day at Kaintuck Territory which will include the concerts, all the shows, rides and attractions at the park, are covered by a one price admission. Kaintuck Territory is located five miles southwest of Kentucky Dam on highway 641, in western Kenturcky's lakes area.

Judge loses his job over cup of coffee

NEW YORK (AP) — A coffee vendor whose product so displeased a county judge that he was hauled into court in handcuffs and given a tongue-lashing has been awarded $141,000 for violation of his civil rights.

Suffolk County Judge William Perry lost his $40,990 job over a cup of coffee.

A Brooklyn federal court jury awarded 37-year-old Thomas Zarcone $80,000 in compensatory damages, to be paid by Perry and Deputy Sheriff James Windsor, who handcuffed Zarcone; $60,000 in punitive damages, to be paid by Perry; and $1,000 in punitive damages from Windsor.

A spokesman for the Royal Globe Insurance Co., which insures judges for compensatory damages, confirmed Wednesday that Zarcone rejected an out-of-court settlement of $205,000 offered by Royal Globe and Perry. He had sued for $5 million.

"I am very relieved," said Zarcone.

Zarcone said he had no regrets about not taking the out-of-court offer, explaining that he would have had to drop a claim now pending in state court in Riverhead.

According to testimony, Judge Perry had sent Sheriff Windsor to buy coffee from Zarcone's truck outside the courthouse on the evening of April 30, 1975. Ten minutes later, Zarcone testified, he was handcuffed and told "to come to the judge's chambers to see about the coffee, because it was terrible."

Perry had testified, "I was irritated by the quality of the coffee and I felt it was an injustice on all of the people who had to go to court that evening and buy the product."

Zarcone said Perry yelled at him and claimed his coffee had been watered down. He said the incident, which occurred in traffic court in Hauppauge, N.Y., caused him to have nightmares in which he saw Perry hurling daggers at him. He said courthouse workers stopped buying food and beverages at his truck, forcing him out of business.

Perry was removed from the bench 12 days ago by the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court for having given "false testimony" about the incident.

Number of claimants decreases 10 per cent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The number of Missouri's unemployment insurance claimants was down by almost 10 per cent in June compared to the previous year, according to the state Division of Unemployment Security.

The division said the total number of claimants, at 65,430, decreased 6,970 from the previous year's total of 72,400.

Division Director Joesph Dietrich said the drop was partly because of the seasonal increase in outside work activities.

New claims were up slightly as special unemployment assistance requests increased by 4,313 to 6,123 as schools closed for the summer, Dietrich said.

The total benefit payments were more than $16.36 million, he added.

Informal 1960 recording to benefit Audie Murphy family

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When Harry Nilsson made an informal recording in Hollywood in 1960, he had no idea the material would benefit the family of the late actor and World War II hero Audie Murphy 17 years later.

Thanks to the generosity of Nilsson and the thoughtfulness of Nashville record producer Scotty Turner, proceeds from the current album "Nilsson: Early Tymes" will go to Murphy's widow and two sons.

Nilsson agreed to release the previously unused material out of respect for Turner, who got him started recording. Turner, in turn, wants to help out the Murphy family because he and Murphy were close friends before Murphy died in a 1971 plane crash near Roanoke, Va.

"This shows Harry Nilsson is a superstar in his heart as well as in music," Turner said.

Although Murphy was a successful actor as well as a songwriter, his estate is tied up in litigation. So Turner particularly wants to help Murphy's elder son, Terry, 25, who aspires to be a singer or songwriter.

"If you can't help out your best friend's son, you're not too good of a person," said Turner, who has produced more than 70 acts in his 20-year career.

Murphy and Turner wrote 18 songs together, including "Shutters And Boards," recorded by Jerry Wallace and Dean Martin, and "When The Wind Blows In Chicago," recorded by Roy Clark.

"Audie couldn't carry a tune in a bucket but he was a magician with words," Turner recalled.

They were such close friends that Murphy was the godfather to Turner's daughter and gave Turner some of his war medals.

"He wasn't pompous," Turner said. "He never claimed he was a great actor and didn't like to watch his own pictures."

Nilsson, who was 17 when the album was recorded, met Turner in Los Angeles just before the informal recording session.

"I was hanging around a publisher's office and there was a kid there with a guitar between his knees," Turner recalled. "He said he sang and wrote, so we went into a music room and he was the best I'd ever heard."

Turner later took him to various music companies. Nine years later, after winning a Grammy Award for "Everybody's Talkin'," Nilsson wrote to Turner: "I owe you my beginning."

Then two years ago, the unused tapes turned up from Nilsson's 1960 recording session — his first. Turner asked for, and received, authority to release the voice track with the addition of some finishing instrumentation and background voices.

Mitchell addresses Kiwanis

Robert Mitchell Jr. of Mitchell Insurance, Inc., Sikeston, told the Kiwanis Club of Sikeston Tuesday that too few voices have been raised in this country protesting the "outrageous awards being made to persons taking advantage of our legal system to get rich quick."

Speaking on behalf of the Independent Insurance Agents of Missouri (IIAM), he cited the example of a lawnmower manufacturer who was held liable for injuries resulting from an incident in which two men picked up a lawnmower and used it to trim a hedge.

He pointed out that under new legal interpretations, the seller or manufacturer of a product is asked to guarantee safety for the user, regardless of the negligence of the user.

The speaker added that products have been subject to litigation regardless of their age. One St. Louis firm, for example, was recently named the defendant in a suit based on an injury caused by a machine that was almost 100 years old.

He said manufacturers are being held liable in cases where their products have been improperly maintained, or modified by the owner.

The public's increasing propensity to sue is evidenced in the number of liability suits, which have increased from about 40,000 a year in the 1960's, to hundreds of thousands a year by the early 1970's. And to make matters worse, in 1972 the average award in such cases was over six times greater than what it was in 1965, he added.

The IIAM speaker said the liability explosion is forcing business and professional people to increase the prices of their goods and services in order to make up for the higher premiums they must now pay for product liability and malpractice insurance.

He said one Missouri firm that produces special pressure release devices has found that their liability coverage will increase from $5,000 to $145,000 a year – if they can get it at all.

"Despite what some may think, insurance companies do not pay claims out of some bottomless pool of funds," he said. In 1975, for example, $2 was either paid or reserved for payment of claims by insurance companies for every $1 in premiums they collected for product liability coverage. This is the insurance purchased by those who make or sell products to compensate users who suffer injury or damage as a result of using that product.

"We must all work together to obtain relief in the form of innovative legislation to prevent the unfair redistribution of our country's economic and financial resources which is resulting from huge awards being given to a relatively few successful litigants and their attorneys," the speaker concluded.

Among legislative proposals and tort reforms he outlined which could alleviate the problem are:

— Adoption of a reasonable statute of limitations starting from the date of the sale of the product.

— Recognition in the courts of the "state of the art" when the product was manufactured.

— Recognition in the courts of the accountability of the owner-user as to maintenance, operation, supervision, training, safety devices, warnings, etc.

— Limits on the amount of lawyers' contingency fees.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, Wiley Post completed the first round-the-world solo flight in his plane, the "Winnie May."

On this date —

In 1937, the U.S. Senate defeated President Franklin Roosevelt's measure to reorganize and enlarge the Supreme Court.

In 1943, in World War II, Allied forces captured the capital of Sicily, Palermo.

In 1950, King Leopold III returned to Belgium after six years in exile.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon ended months of speculation by announcing that he wanted Vice President Spiro Agnew as his running mate again, in the election to be held in 1972.

One year ago: The House of Representatives overrode President Gerald Ford's veto of a $4 billion public works program to create more jobs.

Thought for today: By your works ye shall be known. — The Bible.

Construction work on the Nazarene Church at the corner of Scott and Trotter streets is progressing nicely. The walls, which are of hollow tile, and the roof of the building are practically completed.

The Lutherans of Sikeston and vicinity have bought the building on College avenue, in the north part of town formerly owned and used by L. C. Erdmann as a warehouse for automobiles. The building will be remodeled and used as a temporary house of worship by the Lutherans, who for some months past have been having services twice a month in the community building at Miner.

Crops in the Hooe School district, north of Vanduser, were badly damaged by hail Tuesday when a heavy rain fell throughout the territory north and west of Sikeston.

The emergency plant being installed by the Missouri Utilities is rapidly nearing completioin. The plant is housed in a new addition to the present plant and can be put in operation on short notice.

Domestic robot nears production

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A company here plans to manufacture a 5-foot-2, 180-pound robot that can serve your dinner, vacuum your rugs, babysit for your kids and insult your enemies.

"We've programmed the robot to approximate human behavior. The only limitations to what it can do is the boundary of imagination and the cost factor," says Anthony Reichelt, president of Quasar Industries Inc.

The robot, which the company calls a domestic android, has been researched for the past eight years and is now in the final testing stages. "We're about 22 months away from production," Reichelt said, adding the robots will sell for under $4,000.

Quasar's only business is manufacturing robots. Until now, the company's robots have been used for animated props and as promotional gimmicks.

"This whole science is in its infancy," Reichelt said. "Instead of just kidding around with promotional things, we've reached the state of the art to come out this summer with a paramedic robot."

The paramedic robit is considered by some medical authorities to be a useful psychological tool in dealing with autistic children, Reichelt said.

"We put on a show for kids at a hospital in Scranton, Pa., last summer. An 11-year-old there had been hurt in a car accident in which one brother was killed and another brother seriously injured. The boy regained consciousness but refused to talk to anyone," he said.

"We sent the robit in and it started talking to the boy. When there was no response, the robot called the boy a 'dummy,' which we programmed it to call nearly everyone. Within 20 minutes, the kid was babbling away. Doctors had spent days trying to get him to talk," Reichelt said.

It is shaped like a cone with a bubble head and two arms. It carries a computer which can be programmed by the owner with a calculator-like device, he said.

The robot responds to an owner's voice.

If anyone breaks into the owner's house, the robot is programmed to sound an alarm. It then goes to the point of entry and verbally challenges the intruder, Reichelt said.

The robot can be programmed to speak any language. "We can have it become anything you want, from a Japanese houseboy to a French maid. It can also give foreign language lessons," he said.

What's the law?

The case of the too-secret will

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Mr. Wimple was so secretive that he didn't even talk to himself. Consequently, when he decided to make a will, he cautiously arranged for two of his neighbors to witness his signature without telling them what kind of document he had signed. In fact, he folded it over so that no part of it could be read.

Years later, when Mr. Wimple finally died, it developed that in addition to being very aged, he was also well-seasoned: During his lifetime he had salted away a small fortune. And consequently, when several of his relatives found out that they had been disinherited, they attacked the validity of his will in court.

"To be legal," they argued, "a will must be witnessed by people who know what they are witnessing. In this case, the witnesses didn't know what they were witnessing. As far as they knew, it could have been the Declaration of Independence."

"That's ridiculous," responded the executor named in Mr. Wimple's will. "A will is as personal as a love affair. If a man wants to keep his will entirely under wraps so that no one will know what they'll receive upon hi death -- if anything -- he has the absolute right to do it. To will or not to will -- that is his secret."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of Mr. Wimple's will?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that "to witness" means to see something done. In this case, Mr. Wimple's witnesses did not see him sign his alleged will since they did not know what he was signing. While they saw him sign something, concluded the judge, they had no idea what it was.

Makowicz Enters U.S. Jazz Scene

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

"I just finished making an album with Adam Makowicz," says record producer John Hammond, who has worked with a lot of greats during his long, distinguished career, "and it's one of the best albums I ever had anything to do with."

It's also the first album made in America by Polish jazz pianist Makowicz, 37, making his first visit here May through July this year. He's playing at the Cookery in Greenwich Village and exciting a lot of interest among New York's knowledgeable jazz fans.

Hammond says that early last summer, "somebody put a record by this fellow on my desk. I listened to it and immediately got in touch with Benny Goodman who was going over to Poland. I asked him if he'd listen to him. Benny never did, but he brought back a cassette of him playing that was even better than what I'd heard on the record.

"I really went to work. I got in touch with the International Jazz Federation in Eastern Europe. I got Barney Josephson interested in booking him at the Cookery. I got Willis Conover of the Voice of America to hear him and a CBS lawyer in on it and we got working papers and an exit visa for him."

Makowicz, speaking between sets in surprisingly good English, says papers permitting him to work in America are harder to come by than an exit visa from Poland. "There are hundreds of American musicians playing all over Europe with never any problem. But the American musicians' union doesn't like it if a European musician wants to play here.

"England is the second most difficult place to get permission to work. At a jazz festival in London in April I played with Clark Terry's big band, but I played only one concert because of the permission problem.

Makowicz plays both in Eastern and Western Europe. In January, when Jazz Forum magazine polled its readers to select "Top People '77," there were 1,306 replies from 32 countries. Makowicz received 374 votes to place No. 1 in the European jazz pianist category.

He was born in Czechoslovakia, lives now in Warsaw, as do his parents, now retired.

ADAM MAKOWICZ

His mother, a piano teacher, taught him classical piano for nine years. "I was 7 years old when I heard jazz on records and radio. From that time, I wanted to play only jazz; I liked the sound better."

Asked about pianists he has listened to, Makowicz says, "Art Tatum was the greatest. Erroll Garner had the greatest influence on me."

Hammond says, "Unlike what some writers have said, Adam is in no way a copy or competitor of Art Tatum. You can tell he likes Keith Jarrett but he has a much better technique than Keith. He was influenced by Tatum, obviously. He has been really trying to find something of his own and I think he has."

He started playing outside Poland about 10 years ago, after making his professional debut in Poland, with a group, in 1962. For four years he worked with Michal Urbaniak and his wife, singer Urszula Dudziak, in avant-garde style, with electric piano.

Hammond says, "I made Columbia release a record he made with Urszula in Switzerland, called 'Newborn Light,' that was very avant-garde. I didn't care if it only sold 500 copies. He's a master of the Fender electronic piano. She was singing in quarter tones."

However, Makowicz prefers the acoustic, grand piano, and he likes to play solo. He usually gives concerts rather than appearing in clubs. He has made about 30 albums in Europe, the latest four of them solo albums.

For his job in New York, in a restaurant, he is stressing melody, standard tunes, with fairly short treatments of each one, and is downplaying his avant-garde side.

"I want to make it more easy for listening," he says. "It's not the same public as at jazz festivals."

In Europe, he says, each country has one or two very good jazz pianists. Jazz in Europe, he says, is considered art with a capital A. "At jazz festivals, each musician plays a new program of his own compositions, to show what he has to contribute now to jazz.

"When I write a new composition, I play it first for my wife. She says, 'It is good,' or, 'Maybe you should change it.' "

Makowicz has been booked for the solo piano night at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York, along with Earl "Fatha" Hines, Teddy Wilson and George Shearing. The evening is dedicated to Erroll Garner.

He knows English, Makowicz says, because that's what musicians from many countries speak to each other when they meet in Europe.

When Urbaniak and his wife came to America, they stayed. Hammond is pleased that Makowicz is returning to Poland. "I want to encourage people when they come here to go back. Otherwise the authorities will stop letting anybody come."

"I got one hour and 20 minutes of usable music in a three-hour session," Hammond says. "That's how good he was. I just finished editing the album and there's not one splice in the whole thing. I think it's the first time it ever happened.

"He's superbly equipped with taste and technique. Columbia will release the album in August or September. We may call it 'Adam's Cooking.' But that title's probably not as good as he deserves."

New job office to open in Dexter

DEXTER -- Jack Keane, director of the division of industrial relations for the State of Missouri, will be in Dexter Aug. 1 to officiate at the opening of the new division of employment security office on Sassafras Street.

The building has been occupied by the district welfare office staff, but that group has now moved, and the employment security staff is in the process of moving in, Smith said.

The building is owned by Gary Dowdy, local builder, who is also under contract to construct an addition to the present building on the south side ot house the district welfare office staff. Work is expected to begin on this structure in the next few days.

Smith, who has been active not only in securing the employment office for Dexter but also in keeping the district welfare office here, is in charge of plans for the Aug. 1 ceremony. Mayor Willis Conner and other city and state officials are expected to participate.

SeMo District Fair set Sept. 13-17

CAPE GIRARDEAN -- The annual Southeast Missouir Distriuct Fair will be held at the Arena Park Sept. 13-17.

Connie Smith, "The Grand Ole Opry" star, and Hank Thompson will perform Friday night. Ray Stevens, noted for "The Streak," "Everything is Beautiful," and many more popular songs, will perform Saturday night.

Five days and nights of entertainment are planned including: Sept. 13, the tractor pull contest; Sept. 14, the Joie Chitwood Auto Thrill Show, and Sept. 15, the Grand Demolition Derby -- all at 8 p.m. in the grandstand!

Friday and Saturday afternoons, Sept. 16 and 17, the SeMo District Fair will offer free grandstand attractions of harness racing and the worl-famous Budweiser Champion Clydesdales.

The midway carnival will provide thrills for all ages.

Exhibits of livestock on the grounds and many exhibits inside the air conditioned arena building will be on display. Tickets are on sale now. Write P.O. Box 70, Cape Girardeau, Mo 63701 for more information.

Truckload of hams ripped off

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The FBI Thursday entered a case in which a load of $50,000 worth of canned hams bound from Omaha for Florida was sold in Kansas Wednesday.

Police said the driver apparently stole the semitrailer while working for Watkins Motorlines, Inc., of Omaha. Watkins said one of its trailer rigs failed to arrive on schedule in Florida Wednesday.

The company said the trailer contained nearly 35,000 pounds of Farmland brand canned hams when it left Omaha last Thursday.

Meanwhile, Kansas Bureau of Investigation agents notified Omaha police that Farmland Hams were being sold Wednesday in the Topeka area at below cost. A Kansas official said a chain of tire stores had purchased a truckload of hams.

Watkins Motorlines employes told Omaha police that last Thursday a mam answered a newspaper ad the company had placed for a truck driver. He supplied the company with a name and credentials identifying him as as an experienced driver from Kansas, and they hired him.

Wednesday, police said, the employes picked a picture from the FBI mug files that they identified as that of the man who drove off in the truck. Police said the 41-year-old man identified was known to bilked other companies in similar schemes in the past.

Fish kill conditions still prevail

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - The biological conditions which caused the massive fish kill last week in the Osage River below Bagnell Dam continue to pose problems, according to state Department of Conservation officials.

The recent kill destroyed an estimated one million fish, mostly shad. Authorities said the fish died because of a lack of oxygen caused by warm water and organic materials in the water.

Those conditions sill exist and "pose unusual biological threat to the Lake of the Ozarks and the Osage River below Bagnell Dam," the department said Wednesday.

"What we need is for the lake to settle down and settle out so that plant life can start once again to kick some oxygen into the system," said Stanley michealson, a fisheries biologist with the department.

Michealson said many factors probaboly caused the fish kill, includng heavy rains which washed decomposable material into thelake. Such material uses up oxygen as it decomposes, he said.

In addition, he said turbid water, which shuts out sunlight, caused the aquatic life to die, thus using more oxygen.

RESOLUTION

A RESOLUTION DECLARING THE NECESSITY FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF ONE AND ONE-HALF INCH HOTMIX ASPHALTIC PAVEMENT ON A STABILIZED BASE WITH CONCRETE CURB AND GUTTERS ON BLANTON STREET FROM THE WEST SIDE OF DEMPSTER STREET TO THE NORTH SIDE OF BUTLER STREET. IN THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI; STATING THE NATURE OF THE IMPROVEMENT; THE ESTIMATED COST AND PROVIDING THAT PAYMENT FOR ALL OF THE IMPROVEMENT SHALL BE MADE BY SPECIAL TAX BILLS LEVIED AND ASSESSED AGAINST THE ABUTTING PROPERTY.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIKESTON, STATE OF MISSOURI AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said improvement in accordance with the plans and specifications necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston.

Section 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials, and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement.

Section 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $8.50 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement.

Section 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the Statutes of the State of Missouri and the Ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council, the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement.

Section 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri.

Section 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that is shall be published for seven consecutive insertions.

Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 5th day of July, 1977.

By GARY HARDEE
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The heat wave that has parched Missouri during July may make memories of last winter's bitter cold seem distant. But most of Missouri's elderly and poor have constant reminders of those freezing days: leftover, unpaid utility bills or service that has been cut off.

The Missouri Department of Social Services has drafted a plan using $5.8 million of federal money to help the state's needy pay utility debts, but the department only has until Aug. 31 to determine who is eligible for the program.

"This is a one-shot deal," James Bergfalk, deputy director of the department, says. "We had very little notice to put this program together. We were told June 1 to develop a plan, and at the end of August we'll have to cut off applications for the money."

According to the department's plan, which Bergfalk believes is "the most equitable way to distribute the money for the purpose it was intended," utility companies will receive the federal dollars and then pass benefits on to the state's poor in the form of paid debts and resumed service or credit toward future utility bills.

Bergfalk said half of the $5.8 million will be devoted to helping poor persons over age 65, while the other half will help poor under 65.

Because the past winter was so severe, Bergfalk said, utility rates averaged a lot higher throughout Missouri than in the 1975-76 winter. The department plans to pay, through the utility companies, each verified applicant the difference between his utility bills last winter and the bills for the 1975-76 winter.

"Nobody will receive more than the amount their bills increased from the winter of 1975-76," Bergfalk says.

"If we have established that somebody is making less than say $2,500, and they managed to pay their fuel bills, they had to do it at a hardship," Bergfalk adds.

"That being the case, the utility company will credit the difference between the two winter's rates toward that person's future bills," he said.

The plan still awaits approval by the federal Community Services Administration, but Bergfalk's staff already has begun to inform elderly poor who may be eligible for money. He says within the next two weeks, the state's counties will be notified how much money they will receive with which to pay utility companies.

"If we waited to get approval before contacting possible eligible participants in the program we might not get all of the money dispersed," Bergfalk says. "I think we can distribute all of the money."

Bergfalk says the department is mailing letters to poor persons that the state already assists through other programs informing them of their eligibility. Social welfare organizations throughout the state will be responsible for "spreading the word" about the program to persons the department does not know about, Bergfalk says. Bergfalk believes considering the short notice, the plan is a good one.

"I know the plan will be subject to some criticism and there is always some potential for fraud, but I'm confident we are going about it in the best way," he said. "From the fuel supplier's standpoint, we are eliminating bad debt; from the consumer's standpoint, payment of bad debt should modify any rate increase, and those facing cutoff or who have been cutoff will keep or get their service back."

To avoid paying money for persons not eligible to receive it, Bergfalk says the department will double check its lists of eligible persons with the utility companies' lists of persons owing payments.

Bergfalk says utility companies must sign an agreement to use the federal money to help poor persons before they can receive the cash.

"We'll do some post auditing and some spot checking, (to make sure the money is used properly) but it would be hard to monitor everyone," he says. "We feel that if a person felt he should get credit (on his utility bills) and didn't, he would contact us.

"We feel that if we had spent more time on fraud control, we never would get the money dispersed. Every government reaches a point that it costs more money to make sure it doesn't get ripped off than it would if they got ripped off a little bit," he said.

District to build road to kindergarten site

The 12-acre site donated to the R-6 school district for a new kindergarten building is a bargain, even if the district has to build a road to the property, Superintendant Sam Harbin said Thursday night.

Harbin met with a group of civic club and Parent-Teacher Organization presidents and kindergarten committee members.

The district will have to extend Salcedo Road 1,200 feet east of North Main Street to reach the property and then extend another 500 feet along the south edge of the property.

It will cost the district about $37,500 for a 36-foot wide street with curbs and gutters. It will cost another $8,000 to extend water and utility lines to the site. A sewer line already runs across the north edge of the land.

Harbin said the district would have had to build some type of road and run utility lines to any site it chose for the school. He pointed out that the district built Twitty Drive, which runs in front of the junior high school.

Harbin said it would be in the district's interest to see Salcedo Road extended all the way to Ingram Street. That way school buses will have a second exit from the school.

He said the district has been talking with other agencies about getting the street extended, he did not identify the other agencies.

The kindergarten is expected to be ready for the 1978 school year if voters approve the bond issue.

The new kindergarten has been the districts number one priority, Harbin said.

It will replace aging wooden buildings located at Sikeston Memorial Airport. The old buildings were orginally constructed as military barracks during World War II.

District officials freely admit to worrying about the safety of the children in the school. It is a fire hazard, they say, and located at the end of a runway.

The size of the bond issue has not yet been determined because design work on the building has not been completed.

If voters approve the bond issue on Sept. 20, the district's tax levy probably will be increased by 20 to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation, Harbin said.

The property was donated by Mrs. Dorothy Matthews and her children. Harbin said he did not know the exact value of the property, but that the property between the site and North Main Street is zoned commercial and valued at $30,000 an acre.

He said the school site would probably be worthless, but still much more than the cost of putting in a road and utilities.

Harbin said the board gave the family two assurances when it accepted the property: That if the site is not used for a new school, the property will revert to the Matthews family; and that if and when a new elementary school is needed for the north side of Sikeston, it will be built on the same site.

For that reason, the board has asked the Architect to design the kindergarten so that it can be part of an eventual kindergarten elementary school complex.

The building will contain 22,748 square feet in 14 rooms. It probably will be a concrete block structure with brick veneer. It will house 400 five year olds, but can be converted to hold more in the future if that becomes necessary.

Stearnes said the design work has not been completed, because the site had not been donated and accepted until last week.

46 dead, dozens lost in Pennsylvania flood

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Refugees and a volunteer army battling mud and fatigue have found 46 dead in this flood-raveged city. Dozens are missing, and damage is put at more than $200 million.

On Thursday, bodies were pulled from bashed houses and twisted rubble littering the scarred seven-county flood area in southwestern Pennsylvania.

"We're expecting more bodies," said deputy Cambria County coroner Arthur Keiper from his makeshift morgue in the East Hills Elementary School near here. Officials said they had no way yet to accurately guess how many might be dead.

Scattered looting was reported throughout the area, and some residents armed themselves to protect what little they had left. Police arrested three men ransacking a Johnstown bar Thursday night.

Half an inch of fresh rain belted this devastated city of 41,000 Thursday afternoon, briefly raising fears of another deluge, before tapering off to a steady drizzle.

"Oh, my God, were people concerned," said county Civil Defense director Elmer Shenk. "It looked like a major storm, and that's all we would have needed."

The city was evacuated shortly before the storm, which set off mudslides in several areas. Winds up to 65 miles an hour whipped up caked mud, cutting visibility to 100 yards.

The National Weather Service forecast good weather for the weekend, however, giving cleanup crews hope that they would be able to resume work in earnest.

"There is hardly anything that creates the mess a flood creates," said Jack Minnotte, chief of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' engineering division assigned here.

The Corps said damage in Johnstown alone would exceed $117 million.

"Had we not built the flood control project in Johnstown after the 1936 flood, those da,ages today would be $465 million," said Herman Lardieri, a flood plain management expert.

President Carter declared the region a federal disaster area on Thursday and dispatched special assistant Greg Schneiders to serve, as Schneiders described it, as the President's "eyes and ears."

He told reporters he plans to set up one-stop relief centers where victims can take care of all their flood-related problems at one time.

An estimated 50,000 persons were displaced when torrential rains pushed mountain rivers and streams over their banks along a 70-mile stretch of the Conemaugh River valley.

College dormitories and school buildings were converted to makeshift shelters, but many survivors simply packed what few belongings they could find and pulled out.

"The family won't be able to come back,

Bodies of 9 burn; some bound, gagged

PROSPECT, Conn. (AP) — The bodies of a mother, seven of her children and a visiting cousin were found in their fire-wrecked house early today in this suburb of Waterbury, police said. Authorities confirmed that at least half the victims were bound and gagged, but would not comment on reports that the woman was shot.

A state police spokesman also would not comment on a report that the fire appeared to have been set and smoldered for at least an hour before firemen arrived at 4:10 a.m.

Police said a neighbor, Mrs. Joseph Palino, smelled smoke and heard screams coming from the home and notified fire authorities.

The dead women was identified as Cheryl Beaudoin. Police identified the children as Fred, 12, Sharon, 10, Debbie, 9, Paul, 8, Rod, 6, Holly, 5, and Mary Lou, 4. The eighth child was identified as Jennifer Santoro, 6, a visiting cousin from Waterbury.

Police said the husband, Fred Beaudoin, was working the midnight to 7 a.m. shift as a machinist at the Pratt & Whitney plant in North Haven at the time of the fire.

Drugs stolen in E. Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- A breakin Wednesday night are early Thursday morning at Beuton's Drug Shop, 124 North Washington St. neted thieves $121 and drugs and damage was valued at $257, according to s Sgt. Bill Aycock, who investigated with ponce chief Jake Abner.

Aycock said today that the various types of drugs stolen were taken off shelves and were not classified as narcotics or controlled drugs. Some refrigerated medicine had been opened and spilled out into the refrigerator Aycock said.

Heat wilts beans

A month of high temperatures and low rainfall is taking a toll on many area farm fields. These soybeans on the Flossie Blackburn farm, Route Two, are wilting and dying. Little relief for the plants is in sight. While temperatures are expected to be cooler this weekend, hot weather is being predicted for next week. (Daily Standard photo)

The Community has expressed a great deal of interest in the special Red Cross blood drive scheduled for Tuesday, Harold Jones, administrator, and Dr. Daniel Rosenstein, pathologist at Missouri Delta Community Hospital, said in a press conference at the hospital this morning.

The special blood drive is being conducted because "response to previous blood drives has not brought about nearly enough donors," Jones said.

Dr. Rosenstein, who is a member of the medical advisory committee of the Missouri-Illinois Regional Red Cross Program, said that while daily use of units of blood at the hospital varies, the use averages between 100 and 150 units per month.

Jones said the hospital has approximately 250 units pledged and hope to get at least 400 in the upcoming blood drive and urged anyone who wishes to give blood to come Tuesday. The blood donor station will be set up in the old nurse's residence building between the hospital and the First Christian Church.

2 treated for injuries in accidental shooting

Two women were treated for injuries received when a shotgun accidently discharged Thursday night.

Treated in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital for shrapnel wounds to the leg and thigh and released were Lee Ann Beck, 23, of 1009 Virginia St., and Margorie O. Beck, 45, of 947 Vernon St.

The accident occurred about 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Street address while the two women were standing in the driveway with their husbands talking.

Public safety officers said Joe Beck Sr. 947 Vernon St. and his wife drove up in an old pickup truck he had just bought. As he got out of the truck, he handed a shotgun to his son, Joe Beck Jr.

The younger Beck pointed the barrell of the gun down and rested it on the concrete driveway.

About 20 minutes later, while they were talking, the gun discharged and pieces of concrete and pellet struck both women.

County Court sets voter registration check date

BENTON — The Scott County Court Thursday heard from Scott County Treasurer Hess Porter, who reported receiving $9,841 from the Department of Revenue Sharing for anti-recession funds. The court also discussed setting Jan. 11, 1978 as the date to check jury boxes for voter registrations.

Porter, said the $9,841 check represents the county's quarterly payment for the period July 1 through Sept. 30.

The anti-recession funds are based on the amount of unemployed persns in the county. The annual amount of money allowed for this program by the federal government to Scott County is $90,191 Porter said.

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig of Sikeston discussed setting Jan. 11, 1978 for the County Court and his office to review voter registration in the different townships of the county and to bring the lists of possible jurors up to date.

The court agreed to this date.

John Bollinger, Scott County Recorder of Deeds, reported to the court that with the passage of Senate Bill 112 the recording fees will be increased on Sept. 28.

Bollinger said the new rates will include: Conveying real estate, $3 for first page and $2 for each additional page plus a $1 state users fee; recording deeds of trust, releases, affidavits, etc., $3 for first page and $2 for each additional page. The size of the page will be up to the legal size 8½x14.

For recording plats larger than 18x24 inches, the rate will be $25 for each page and copying charges will be $5 for each page.

Bollinger said this is the first recording fee increase allowed since 1951.

Burglars take food, money

Burglars took meat and candy bars from the Trade Winds Cafe and change from a vending machine at Helms Quick Sak, according to the Public Safety Department.

Public Safety officers found a broken window about 4:18 a.m. Thursday in the Trade Winds Cafe, 875 W. Malone Ave. The window was used by burglars, who stole 20 pounds of hamburger worth $17 and 91 candy bars worth $5.

A vending machine was pryed open between 3:10 a.m. and 3:20 a.m. Thursday at Helmes Quick Sak, 110 Branum St. About $10 was taken from the coin box.

SIKESTON — The 40th annual membership meeting of the Scott-New Madrid-Mississippi Electric Cooperative will be held at the high school in Sikeston on Aug. 9, starting at 7:30 p.m., according to D. H. Zaricor, co-op general manager.

Progress and financial reports will be given and four directors will be elected to the 12-member board.

Entertainment will be provided by the Liberty Gospel Group, of the Cape Girardeau area. Prizes will be awarded to members in attendance.

Guest speaker will be Derry Brownfield, who has a farm program on 50 radio stations in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee, using the familiar sign-off, "I'm Derry Brownfield, reporting agriculture."

According to his informational material, Brownfield's following hass grown because farmers and others in agri-related fields not only receive the factual information they expect concerning cattle, hogs, grain, beans and cotton, but also like the way he explains how other facts of the nation's industry effect agriculture. He is known to "not hesitate to verbally chastise the secretary of agriculture, Congressmen or anyone else whom he believes is not acting in the best interest of agriculture."

An addition to the program will be a presentation of a resolution of commendation from the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce to the co-op for its 40 years of service in rural electrification.

The cooperative now serves 11,880 member-consumers over 2,454 miles of distribution lines in Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Bollinger and Cape counties. In 1976 the group consumed 105,919,782 kilowatt hours of electricity at a wholesale cost of $2,165,270.08.

MAJORITY RULE'S OTHER SIDE

If only the bullheaded, white-dominated regimes of South Africa and Rhodesia would concede power gracefully to their black majorities, everything would be dandy on that continent, we are told.

Andrew Young, our highly quotable ambassador to the U.N. who seems to create a new diplomatic flap every day, recently branded the government of South Africa as "illegitimate" because "just a few million people make decisions about a nation of more than 20 million."

But black Americans, of whom Young is one, should of all people be realistic about majority rule, submits a South African newspaper correspondent in this country.

Since black Americans live as a minority in a white majority, and white South Africans are destined to live as a minority in a black majority, the two actually share a common lot, says Henry Katzew. Because of their own experience, black Americans could be a catalyst for greater understanding between white and black in South Africa. Yet there are increasingly strident calls for "majority rule."

"What are you fighting for?" he asks. "For human rights in South Africe or majority rule?" It may not even turn out to be majority rule, but rule in the name of the majority by self-appointed black dictators or oligarchies.

Unfortunately, we can already guess the answer. When majority rules does come to South Africa and Rhodesia, as it eventually must, either peacefully or through bloodshed, will Andrew Young and others who are so concerned about human rights in those countries fall as suddenly silent as they now are about the victims of "legitimate" black tyrants like Idi Amin?

INFLATION MARCHES ON

Consumer prices in the United States rose in May by "only" 0.6 per cent, and the administration was quick to point to the figure as a favorable sign.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell called it "a significant decline" and predicted that the inflation rate will slow in coming months.

True, May's rise in the consumer price index was more moderate than the 0.8 per cent increase in April and the full 1 per cent jump in February, but is it anything to be satisfied with? We think not.

On an annual basis, the May figure works out to an increase of 7.2 per cent, which is too high for economic good health. For the entire year, White House economists forecast a rise in consumer prices of 6 to 6.5 per cent.

Their target, even if achieved, is historically above average for the country and would be dangerous if sustained for several years. For example, while 6 per cent inflation is less scary than the double-digit version of the recent past, it would cut the dollar's value in half in about seven years.

Inflation -- built-in, persistent and endemic -- remains the single most serious threat to the nation's economy, and it must not become a matter of complacency.

New kid on the block

EMBASSY EAVESDROPPING
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

At last the national news media are reporting on what many people for many months have believed is the biggest national security scandal in the country: the fact that Soviet agents in Washington, D.C., are eavesdropping on most of the long-distance calls made to or from our government offices.

The Rockefeller Commission on CIA Activities Within the United States originally had nine pages on this subject in its 1975 report, but all but two paragraphs were deleted because Henry Kissinger didn't want to upset detente.

Sen. Frank Church's committee report on the CIA referred to this situation with one paragraph, stating simply that we can't do anything about it.

Ignoring the problem did not make it go away. A computer complex in the Soviet Embassy has the capability of monitoring 12,000 telephone conversations a minute and of picking up all telephone conversations transmitted by microwave within twelve miles of the Soviet Embassy.

The Soviets are carrying on this massive eavesdropping from each of their six pieces of property in our country. These are located in Washington, D.C., the United Nations, Long Island, Maryland, San Francisco and Chicago.

By monitoring American telephone calls, the Soviets can get access to all kinds of secret military and economic information known to executive branch officials, members of Congress and some private citizens. Out of the traffic of unimportant phone calls, Soviet high-speed computers sort out those containing sensitive information.

There is widespread speculation that such telephone eavesdropping may have given the Soviets secret economic information which enabled them to make the deals for their huge grain purchases in 1972, which ultimately became known as the Great Grain Robbery.

It is even possible that "Deep Throat," the mysterious informer who passed inside information about Watergate scandals to the press, may have been somebody in the Soviet Embassy who learned the secret tidbits by telephone monitoring.

The United States has similar monitoring equipment in our U. S. Embassy in Moscow, but it is only about 10 per cent effective because the Russians jam it by beaming radiation at our embassy. This is what causes the high radiation readings at our embassy.

Scientists and physicians are divided on the question of how harmful this is to the health of American personnel and whether it caused the several cases of cancer among U.S. diplomats who have been stationed there. U. S. protests against this deliberate radiation of our embassy have fallen on deaf Soviet ears.

The recent news stories which detail the facts of Soviet Embassy eavesdropping on American telephone conversations suggest that there are only three solutions to this problem: burying all the telephone lines underground, or installing scrambling or coding devices.

There is one simple solution, however, that would stop it immediately at no cost. Just tell the Soviets to stop their outrageous eavesdropping or else we will close their embassy and consulates and expel their espionage atgents and electronic experts.

For years, the liberals have defended the practice of extending diplomatic recognition to Communist countries on the argument that our embassies serve as valuable "listening posts." It is now abundantly clear that the Soviet Union is doing 90 per cent of the listening.

Human Rights And The Wilmington 10

The Russians seem to have seized on the case of the Wilmington 10 in the hope of distracting the world's attention from their own human rights violation. It's a shrewd tactic; the sentencing alone—up to 34 years for burning a grocery store— is compelling evidence that this North Carolina trial was one of those ugly travesties that periodically besmirch the criminal justice system.

The burning took place in 1971, during a period of high racial tension in Wilmington, N.C. The original trial jury, which had a black majority, was excused and replaced by one with a white majority. Three prosecution witnesses later recanted the testimony that helped send nine black men and one shite woman to prison. Two potentialdefense witnesses said that intimidation by the prosecution prevented them from testifying.

Yet a North Carolina appellate judge has ruled that the defendants weren't entitled to a new trial because there had been no "substantial denial" of their rights the first time around. The defense attorneys said they would appeal.

Given this history, at the very least there's reasonable doubt that the Wilmington 10 committed the crime for which they were convicted. At worst, there was perjured testimoney, prosectorial misconduct and jucicial intemperance. The case is a disgrace to American justice as well as godsend to Soviet propagandists.

It doesn't follow, however, that President Carter's criticism of human rights violations in the Soviet Union are invalid because human rights have also been denied in North Carolina. It's worth noting that the American press is as free to report on the Wilmington case as it is on the harassment of Soviet dissidents. Certainly the reverse isn't true of Tass and Pravda.

What's more, Carter has never suggested that the United States is beyond criticism in human rights matters. Indeed, he has scrupulously noted certain restrictions that conflict with the Helsinki treaty's "basket three' provisions, and in at least one case his Administration has allowed the restrictive practices to continue. The point is not that the United States has a perfect record on human rights, but that totalitarian states shouldn't escape criticsm abroad simply because they have the power to stamp it out at home.

Sex Change

A lady stopped to talk to a little boy in a parked car in a supermarket lot. The lad was having a great time playing with a mongrel of uncertain heritage.

"What's your dog's name, little boy?"

"We call him Ben Hur."

"my, what a funny name for a dog. I'll bet your Daddy helped you pick it out, didn't he?"

"nope. He was just plain old Ben until he had a batch of pups."

May Be Masonry Bonanza

If the energy plans of President Carter are fully approved and implemented, hundreds of thousands of homes in the United States will be converting from gas and oil to coal heating equipment.

For the older homes that used coal or wood in years gone by a chimney will be no problem. Most already have one or more in fair or good condition and the only expense will be the coal and wood burning furnace.

For most of the newer homes, converstion to coal will not only save vanishing oil and gas but will create a lot of jobs for brick and stone masons. Most of those homes do not have chimneys adequate for coal, and new ones will be necessary. One insurance man also pointed out that where a new chimney becomes necessary, most of them will probably be built on the outside of the present home, adding a fire-safety factor.

Many of us, however, view with less than delight the prospects of having to go back to shoveling coal and carrying out ashes and cinders. But here too, there will be one advantage -- we'll have something to spread on the slick ice on our driveways and streets.

Double Dippers

Washington Bureaucrats have their own language, which often mystifies the rest of us. For example, do you know the difference between a double dipper and a double scooper? According to Side Taylor, research director of the National Taxpayers' Union, a double dipper is a retired military person who holds a civilian job with the government and collects double federal compensation-his pension plus his salary-at the same time.

A double scooper, on the other hand is someone on the federal payroll who also has a close relativee on the government payroll; for example, a Congressman who hires his wife as his administrative assistant. And this brings us to the dipper scooper, which, according to Taylor, "is a double dipper who is also a double scooper."

Time to Invest In A Home

Buying a home is costly, but it promises to be more costly as time goes by.

Perhaps today is the best time to invest in a home in Monroe County, especially since it will probably be worth more when Cannon lake comes in than it will cost today.

That is the history of property in lake areas all over the nation. It will also be the history in the Cannon area.

Remember When ?????

Remember a few years back when state officials hailed the multi-flora rose as a boon to conservation, ideal for fences, around ponds, for wildlife protection, etc., etc., etc.?

Like the old time hedge fences, it soon exhausted its popularity, and instead of an advantage, has proved to be a general nuisance to everyone. So much so that the Legislature had a bill intended to label it as a noxious and dangerous weed and call for its eradication. The bill didn't become law, as it died in committee, but in some later session it will be approved.

Multi-flora rose suffered the same end result as a lot of other fads--too much enthusiasm before all the facts were in.

New Math?

Repairing a completely wrecked automobile by replacing all the parts would cost more than four times as much as buying a new car, according to the American Mutual Insurance Alliance.

The AMIA says its study shows it would cost $21,471 to replace all the parts on a totally wrecked 1977 standard automobile which carries a factory price ticket of $4,681.

We don't doubt the insurance company figures. But we wonder what ever happened to that old mathematical axiom that the whole is the sum of its parts.

The Tourist's Prayer

Heavenly Father, look down on us your humble, obedient tourist servants who are doomed to travel this earth, taking photographs, mailing postcards, buying souvenirs and walking around in drip-dry underwear. We beseech you, O Lord, to see that our plane is not hijacked, our luggage is not lost and our overweight baggage goes unnoticed.

Give us this day divine guidance in our selection of hotels. We pray that the phones work, and that the operators speak our tongue, that there is no mail waiting from our children which would force us to cancel the rest of our trip.

Lead us to good, inexpensive restaurants where the wine is included in the price of the meal. Give us the wisdom to tip correctly in currencies we do not understand. Make the natives love us for what we are and not for what we can contribute to their worldly goods.

Grant us the strength to visit the museums, the cathedrals, the palaces, and if, perchance, we skip an historic monument to take a nap after lunch, have mercy on us for our flesh is weak.

Dear God, protect our wives from "bargains" they don't need or can't afford. Lead them not into temptation for they know not what they do.

Almighty Father, keep our husbands from looking at foreign women and comparing them to us. Save them from making fools of themselves in nightclubs. Aboveall, please do not forgive them their trespasses for they know exactly what they do.

And when our voyage is over, grant us the favor of finding someone who will look at our home movies and listen to our stories, so our lives as tourists will not have been in vain. This we ask you in the name of Conrad Hilton, Thomas Cook and the American Express. Amen.

Beware The Solar Con Men

The phenomenal growth of the solar heating industry has generated worry both within and outside that industry that consumers may be ripped off by unscrupulous or incompetent operators lured by the Carter Administration's proposed tax benefit incentives for solar conversion.

In the rush to harness the sun's limitless power as an alternative to vanishing fossil fuels, all sorts of people have perceived solar energy as a promising new field for profit. The Federal Trade Commission is developing a program of standards and advertising on solar equipment "to forestall consumer exploitation." The Department of Housing and Urban Development also is working on uniform standards for such installations and the Energy Research and Development Administration has a toll-free telephone line to answer consumers' questions.

The Council of Better Business Bureaus warns that "some manufacturers may be overenthusiastic about their products" and may exaggerate the effectiveness of solar heating or downplay its costs. At an installation cost of $4500 a thousand square feet, or more, solar must be financed in the house mortgage for most families. And there still must be a backup system for cloudy days.

$5 Special Delivery Letter?

NEW YORK — I'm dealing with some flat predictions here -- hitting you in the pocketbook -- by a fellow who has a Jimmy the Greek record on crystal-ball gazing. This chap, postal union chief Moe Biller, who led the 1970 Easter mail rebellion which brought out the National Guard, says we'll soon be paying 25 cents, and not long afterwards 50 cents, a piece to mail a first class letter.

Also if I project him right -- and it's my projection -- the price of a first class special delivery will run into four and then five dollars -- each.

And, says Biller, the postal system as we -- and American commerce and industry -- know it will go the way of the dinosaur and the free lunch.

Biller is a militant and proud of it. But it isn't the politics of this man, who leads the 24,000-member New York Metro Area Postal Union (AFL-CIO), which I discuss. What is crucial is his knowledge of the postal system so vital to the sheer existence of American business, of much of the publishing world, of senior citizens, of those living on Social Security or corporate dividends.

Biller, who also speaks for 70,000 postal workers (mostly inside employes) throughout the Northeast, predicts the cracking of the mail pipelines, the clogging of bulk mail arteries and the full collapse of the U.S. Postal Service in the very foreseeable future.

I take him seriously. I didn't some years ago when he warned that a first class letter would soon cost 15 cents. Now business is heading towards a 16-cent stamp. And to set the framework right, remember the hundreds of millions of dollars American commerce and industry such as A.T. & T., Consolidated Edison or insurance companies, etc., pay for postage each year.

Sooner or later this added cost gets passed on to the consumer -- everybody who pays bills, insurance premiums and has a telephone, for example.

After the blackout here I spoke at length with Biller. As he suggested I looked at the record. Until 1957 first class mail was two and three cents. Then, to 1962, this stamp cost four pennies. Later it was a nickel until 1967. Then to 1971 -- actually some six years ago -- it was six cents. It was at that time that Biller warned of the 15-cent stamp. Biller recalls that "people laughed at me but now I'm predicting 25 cents for a first class stamp in another five years and 50 cents in about a decade. Just watch."

As for special delivery, it went from 10 cents in the late '30s to $1.25 today and shortly it will go to $2.10, plus regular postage, of course. It can't be too long before it's three dollars a letter. Or $4 or $5.

"So you can kiss the special delivery goodbye," Biller said dolefully.

"As for the U.S. Postal Service itself, its disintegration began in the late '40s under Postmaster Donaldson. He said we don't need three mail deliveries a day. Two will do. Now you get one if you're lucky. History shows that the post office once made four and five deliveries a day . . . but today's Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar is ripping the post office apart. And I believe President Carter should ask him to resign.

. . The post office has a $14 billion budget and is constantly losing big money."

There are areas for profit, Biller says, but Bailar won't take them, he charges. Like what, I asked. Biller says that one of the most famous American data processing and multi-national corporations offered the post office a message system which guaranteed a $50-million-a-year profit. Bailar turned it down, Biller charged.

Then we talked of the coming postal rate increase due next May. First class mail goes to 16 cents. "Mom and Pop" citizens' letters will stay at 13 cents -- if properly and technically addressed. Across the board the postage rate hikes will ave·age 22 per cent.

"Start with the small businessman or marginal producer," Biller said angrily. "This could be the straw to break the camel's back and put him out of business. Now if you're Mr Big like A.T. & T. or New York Life, which spend millions a year on first class mail, Bailar is really telling you to take your business elsewhere. And they will."

This is the era of the electronic message transmission and soon enough it will be cheaper than mail. So the post office will lose on first class missives, its biggest profitmaker today. Then what happens to the whole system? Americans mail 89 billion pieces a year.

And Biller says the national unions, representing 600,000 tightly organized postal employes, will begin new wage negotiations with the system next April, a month before the new increases and possible cuts in services take effect. Delivery cuts will slash thousands of jobs. And probably kick off a national postal strike. That could blackout the nation too.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

"Human Error" Creates International Incident

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- An ugly collection of weapons, packed in cartons labeled "books," was shipped recently from the United States to the oil sheikdom of Qatar.

The boxes got as far as the London airport, where they were opened. Instead of textbooks for the University of Qatar, the astonished airport authorities found 12 machineguns; 50 pistols and ammunition to fit them.

The British airport personnel immediately notified the U.S. Customs Service, which alerted the State Department. Then the Transportation Department was brought into the case. Now the incident has escalated into an international incident.

A State Department investigation quickly determined that the Qatar embassy had arranged for all the proper licenses to ship the weapons to the sheikdom. They were not intended, apparently, to start a revolution or to mount a commando raid against Israel. The guns were supposed to be delivered as a routine shipment to the Qatar police.

But the driver who hauled the cartons to the Dulles International Airport, it turned out, had previously shipped some books to the University of Qatar in similar cartons. When he was asked what the latest cartons contained, he innocently answered: "Books." The cartons full of arms, therefore, were shipped out as books.

The State Department, convinced that Qatar was not smuggling arms disguised as books, dismissed the case as "human error." This should have ended the incident.

But over at the Transportation Department, the Hazardous Materials Office publishes an obscure newsletter. The editors somehow learned about the case of the lethal textbooks. So the newsletter reported tersely last month:

"Embassy of Qatar ... offered shipment of small arms and ammunition to air carrier which was described as 'books' and was improperly marked, packed and labeled."

To the sensitive Arabs at the Qatar embassy, the throwaway newsletter looked like an official government publication. It appeared that the federal government, or at least the Hazardous Materials Office, was accusing the friendly little nation of Qatar of arms smuggling.

"We tried to explain all this," a furious spokesman told us. "We talked to the State Department, to the Customs. We are not smugglers!"

Footnote: Our investigation indicates that just as Qatar made a "human error" in misstating the contents of the cartons, so the Transportation Department made a "human error" in not telling the full story of the incident.

Corporate Pressure: Two corporate giants, General Motors and Procter & Gamble, have used their economic clout to block the establishment of the proposed Consumer Protection Agency.

White House sources tell us that both companies threatened to withdraw business from Blue Cross unless the medical insurer softened its support of the consumer agency. Blue Cross insures approximately 750,000 General Motors workers and about 50,000 Procter & Gamble employees.

President Carter has endorsed the Consumer Protection Agency, which would become the consumers' official advocate in Washington. But many corporations fear it would develop into a bureaucratic Ralph Nader that would constantly hound them. Business lobbyists have been swarming over Capitol Hill, therefore, to oppose the creation of the new agency.

But the Blue Cross Association, in behalf of its 84 million members, wrote a strong letter to President Carter on June 1 supporting the proposed agency. "We do not look upon the Agency for Consumer Advocacy as a potential opponent," declared the letter, "but as a partner in identifying consumer issues and meeting consumer needs."

We have checked out the next development carefully with trustworthy sources. They say that Blue Cross executives heard from both General Motors and Procter & Gamble.

According to these sources, General Motors threatened to withdraw some employees from Blue Cross insurance unless the association changed its tune. Procter & Gamble made a similar threat to invoke "economic sanctions" against Blue Cross, our sources say.

Spokesman for both companies vigorously denied that General Motors or Procter & Gamble had threatened Blue Cross in any way. An official Blue Cross spokesman acknowledged that several corporations, including General Motors and Procter & Gamble, had protested the Blue Cross letter. But he also denied that any companies had threatened to withdraw business.

Nevertheless, White House sources say that Washington representatives of Blue Cross called the White House consumer office and tried to water down the June 1 letter.

A Blue Cross executive told the White House sheepishly that the association was not supporting any particular bill. Yet the June 1 letter specifically mentioned the proposed Agency for Consumer Advocacy. The executive also said the Association could not speak for its 84 million members. Yet the June 1 letter emphasized the 84 million membership.

In the end, the Blue Cross official mentioned that the letter was being weakened to "placate" corporate clients. He also confided that General Motors and Procter & Gamble had threatened economic retaliation.

Todays News In Brief

Cannon Dam safety questioned

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The General Accounting office is questioning the safety of the Clarence Cannon Dam in northeast Missouri, according to a report in Friday's St. Louis GlobeDemocrat.

GAO investigators found that "defective" fill with excessive moisture was used in the dam foundation and "a buried river channel" was discovered in the foundation, the GAO said in a report to Congress.

The $232 million water project, being built by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is one of the state's largest and most costly, the newspaper said.

Assistant Army Secretary Charles R. Ford stated in a letter in the GAO report that the design has been altered "as needed" during construction "to account for conditions revealed during construction to insure a safe product."

However GAO said: "In our view the question of dam safety has not been completely resolved, particularly in light of the current concern over dam safety, and will remain so until the project is evaluated independently.

"Therefore we recommend that the secretary of the Army obtain an evaluation of the overall safety of the project from an expert, independent consultant."

Heat toll continues to rise

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Three possible heat-related deaths were reported Thursday, as temperatures went into the 90s for the tenth day running.

At last 11 heat-related deaths were reported in the St. Louis area earlier this week.

A 74-year-old woman and her husband were brought to Homer G. Phillips Hospital Wednesday night, apparently suffering from heat stroke, a spokesman said.

She was dead on arrival and her husband died Thursday morning. Their names were not released, pending notification of relatives.

Police said the body of Alfred Schneider, 83, was discovered in bed Thursday by relatives. He was last seen one week ago. His home had no air conditioning.

PFA figures hard to find

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Star reported that the Missouri attorney general is having trouble locating two principal figures in the Progressive Farmers Association at Springfield, a pseudo-farm cooperative at Springfield in which upwards of 7,000 investors apparently lost around $12 million when it went bankrupt.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying Russell E. Phillips, the promoter generally considered to be the mastermind of the operation, is in a southern state. It also said there are reports that Donald E. Burks, a former preident of PFA, no longer is in the country.

The attorney general's office has served on other officers of PFA a notice that it intends to file suit against the firm accusing it of irregularities in the sale of securities.

Missouri's consumer protection law requires that notice be served at least three days before such suits are filed. The law also provides if the accusations are established in court the attorney general can seek the return of money taken from investors.

4 bodies found in elevator

PARK RIDGE, Ill. (AP) — The bodies of four men, all shot to death, were found this morning in an office building elevator in this affluent suburb northwest of Chicago, authorities said.

"I pushed the elevator button and when the door opened I saw them," said B. L. Shershon, an employe in the building. "The four men were piled atop each other in a bloody mass," he said.

The bodies were first discovered by a secretary as she arrived for work.

"She came screaming out of the building, running across the street hysterical," said an attendant at a nearby service station, from where police were called.

The bodies were found about 7:30 a.m.

Other details were not immediately available.

Anti-inflation drive undercut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, disappointed over U.S. Steel Corp.'s decision to raise steel prices, says the move may undercut the administration's anti-inflation program. Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, complained that the steel industry has raised its prices recently much faster than the other American industries.

Brown making Korean trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown leaves Washington today for a trip to South Korea, from which the United States is planning to withdraw its 33,000 troops. Brown will discuss the withdrawal during his trip and negotiate a transfer of U.S. weapons and equipment to keep Korea secure militarily in light of the troop cutback. His journey comes on the heels of publication of a Pentagon task force study allegedly showing that South Korea would need up to $8 billion in equipment to insure its security, including about 250 jet fighters, and hundreds of helicopters, observation planes, missiles and guns.

Egypt, Libya trade charges

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt and Libya accused each other of provoking an air and armor battle Thursday on their border in the North African desert. Cairo said Libyan forces had invaded Egypt from the west and were repelled. The Libyans said Egyptian troops had attacked a Libyan village, killing women and children. The Egyptians said they destroyed 40 tanks and two Libyan warplanes. Libya made no report on losses.

Last woman leader ousted

School board members lose coverage

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — About 2,000 members of the Missouri School Boards Association have lost their liability insurance coverage, MSBA Executive Director James Hart of Columbia said Thursday.

The association's group policy was canceled June 30 and so far the MSBA's search for a new group policy has been unsuccessful, Hart said in an interview.

The insurance covers the individual school board members for any omissions or errors they might make in handling their responsibilities as members of local boards. The MSBA policy was carried by Continental National America (CNA), a group of insurance companies which is headquartered in Chicago, Ill.

The firm cited the high number of claims as the reason for its cancellation of the association's policy, Hart said.

The association had received notification June 16 from CNA that the MSBA liability insurance would be discontinued and although the association continued to negotiate with CNA it was unable to prevent the policy from being terminated, Hart said.

Disposal of hazardous wastes creates problem for Missouri

By SUE A MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Hazardous wastes pose complex problems. Not only are they difficult to define, they are difficult to dispose of and their disposal is often met with public opposition.

"We have to decide what to do with hazardous wastes and how to covercome the opposition of communities towards their disposal," said Joseph Eigner, hazardous waste project chief for the division of environmental quality, department of natural resources.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale recently signed a bill approving the formation of a Hazardous Waste Management Commission for the state. The seven-member appointed commission will be responsible for defining and regulating hazardous wastes.

But until the law becomes effective Oct. 13, the Department of Natural Resources is in "a tough period of transition," Eigner said.

"We are well on our way to developing a good program," he said. "But until the commission is appointed, we are handling problems as they occur."

The two main types of problems have been deciding what to do with hazardous wastes and dealing with community opposition. Eigner said the problems are closely interrelated.

"Once we find a geologically safe place to locate a waste treatment center, we may run into opposition," he said.

Hazardous wastes are materials that are toxic, corrosive, irritating, radioactive, biologically infectious, flammable or explosive. The wastes must present a serious threat to either those who handle them or to the environment, Eigner said.

This definition will be further specified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency next year. The Missouri commission will decide whether to accept or modify the EPA rules, regulations and standards.

"Hazardous waste is a national problem, and there should be uniform regulations between the states," Eigner said. "Missouri's law is one of the best in the country and should have no difficulty being approved by the EPA."

Eigner said the problem of locating hazardous waste treatment centers resembles other social issues, such as locating prisons.

"Everyone agrees that there is a serious problem and that it should be solved," he said. "But then when the time comes to choose a location, no one wants it in their own community."

Eigner said the solution for public opposition is "education and honesty.

"We want to show people that locating a center in an environmentally safe area will pose no health threats," he said. "If the treatment center is well constructed and maintained according to established standards, people should have no irrational fears of explosion or contamination.

"We also need to be open and honest with people," he said. "We shouldn't use euphamisms like 'hazardous waste,' 'industrial waste', but come right out and tell people what it is, what they can expect."

Eigner named several examples of hazardous wastes and the types of treatment they need. Floor sweepings from pesticide plants can be buried in "high quality landfills with no danger of polluting underground water sources," he said.

Lead and other materials used in the metal plating industry can be reduced to solid sludge and buried. Flammable solvents that would pose a problem if handled or released into the air can be recycled or destroyed in modern incinerators.

"The purpose of a treatment facility in the first place is to manage the most damaging substances, and people should be told that," he said. "In the past, though, we've found that often people would rather not know where the stuff is going. They'd rather not know that it's near them, but it's something they should be aware of."

Eigner said a good way of providing public education will be by holding more public hearings while locations are being decided. An amendment on the bill stipulates that treatment centers cannot be located closer than one-quarter mile within a residential area.

Eigner said the public hearings will help alleviate opposition once people learn there is little basis for their fears about landfills, incinerators, disposal wells and other types of treatment facilities.

Helping solve the problem of public opposition will go hand in hand with finding the best locations for waste treatment centers, he said. "We have a better and stronger law than most other states, and that can only work to our advantage."

200 bills passed

JEFFERSON CITY -- Approximately 200 pieces of legislation passed this session, including:

—Prohibiting geographic discrimination in homeowners insurance.

—Reducing cost of credit life insurance (purchased to cover repayments of debts in case of death or disability) by bringing it under state regulation.

—Allowing judges in divorce cases to grant visitation rights to grandparents.

—Decriminalizing public drunkeness.

—Establishing a means of handling dangerous and toxic waste materials.

—Allowing Missouri voters to decide whether the state constitution should permit certain sweepstakes.

—Letting Missourians vote on whether the constitution should allow cities to build utility facilities jointly with other cities, cooperatives, or private utilities.

—Adoption of a new criminal code designed to eliminate discrepancies clarify and organize the code into a more modern, effective system.

—Re-enactment of the death penalty in Missouri which the Supreme court should approve.

—A new formula for distributing state aid to local schools.

—Five times as many measures were defeated or died in the session:—Mandate statewide reassessment of property for tax purposes.

—Exempt food and drugs from sales tax.

—Establish a presidential primary in Missouri.

—Ratify the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment.

—Provide collective bargaining rights for public employes.. Agriculture remains an important part of Missouri's economy and the 1977 legislative session took note of that fact. A number of bills designed to aid the farming community won approval.

Soybean growers are expected to receive a boost from a law revising the procedure for establishing commodity merchandising councils in Missouri. The revision will allow councils to be established by a majority vote of the producers casting ballots if the voters in favor constitute a majority of the output of all registered producers (rather than requiring approval by voters representing 51 per cent of both the number and output of registered producers).

Once established, the council would allow the state agriculture Department to collect a one-half cent for each bushel of soybeans sold by consenting farmers. The money would go for market promotion as well as research. The 1974 sstate Pesticide Act was revised.

Farmers transporting goods by truck will be relieved of a hindrance when hauling small quantities. The legislature raised the limitation for requiring commercial vehicles to stop at weigh stations. Only trucks licensed for more than 12,000 pounds (rather than 6,000 pounds) will be subject to weight checks.

Rep. F. Eugene Copeland of New Madrid, felt the first session of the 79th General Assembly was a successful one. A measure handled by Copeland will render more money into the general revenue of the state by eliminating the "piracy" of tape recordings. For years, the "tape pirates" were re-recording tapes and cheating the artists out of their royalties and the state out of taxes. This law, which is already in exsistance federally and in most other states, will make such pirating unlawful. He also introduced a bill to aid in safety at railroads. The Public Safety Commission plans to issue films to be shown to school children, gearing them to think safely approaching railroad crossings.

Copeland also sponsored legislation to set up a Missouri Historical Commission which would be a watch dog for the citizens of the state, insuring no historical or valuable buildings, furniture, and other items could be sold or altered without approval. This would eliminate problems such as the sale of valuable antiques from the Governor's Mansion during the previous administration. This Bill did not gain final approval during the session because of time limitations; however, it gained attention and is endorsed by several historical groups and concerned citizens. Copeland plans to re-introduce the measure in January.

Other satisfying developments this year include the full expansion of the Job Service office in Malden. This office also handles unemployment insurances services for those claiming benefits under that program.

The construction and future opening of a tourist center in New Madrid County will aid travelers in the Bootheel as well as the entire state. A third grant to be spent in Copeland's legislative district will be the implementation of citywide signing for the City of Marston. The signs will be placed in conformance with the safer roads program designed to promote safety and minimize traffic accidents throughout the community. Cities in Missouri are receiving these grants through the National Traffic Safety Administration awarded because of the reduction in traffic fatalities as incentive funds.

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For nine seasons Buddy Ebsen starred in CBS' "Beverly Hillbillies." Now an Ebsen offspring, Bonnie, 25, is in a similarly bucolic series for NBC, "The Kallikaks."

It starts Aug. 3, runs five weeks and concerns a West Virginia family that moves to a desolate spot in California, opens a gas station and commences scheming ways to make a fast buck.

Bonnie, a tall, blue-eyed blonde lady with a quick smile, will be essaying Bobbi Lou, daughter of Papa Kallikak.(NBC hastens to claim its show isn't much like "Hillbillies." They note that Jed Clampett's clan was oil-rich, this one is dirt-poor and doesn't live in Beverly Hills, either. Hokay.)

Bonnie may come from a show biz family, but she says she's the only one of Ebsen's seven kids to take up acting, deciding on that after her first year in college.

It's customary for stars to tell their tots to stay out of show biz, that it's full of no-goodniks who'll break your heart.

Not Ebsen the Elder, she said: "No, he'd never say, 'Don't do this, don't do that.'"

And, she says, she didn't tell him she'd decided to become an actress until the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco approved her application to study there.

Miss E., who also studied with New York acting guru Sanford Meisner, did summer stock, appearing in "Our Town." Then she spent a lot of time simply watching her father and others work in his "Barnaby Jones" series on CBS.

Miss Ebsen, who subsequently landed roles in "Marcus Welby," "The Hardy Boys" and a TV movie, "Smashup on Interstate 5," says her first job was on pop's show, "Barnaby Jones."

She spoke of all this during the traditional interview in Burbank at the NBC commissary, where the soup of the day was potage a la thumb.

Earlier, she'd been reading through the third show's script with other cast members, among them David Huddleston (Papa Kallikak) and Peter Palmer, who starred in the Broadway and movie versions of "L'il Abner" and now is playing a German immigrant.

Bonnie made mention that if the Kallikaks click this summer, there's a good chance NBC will reprise it in January as a mid-season replacement. And if not?

"Well," she said in the lighthearted way some thespians have when facing possible misery, "then it's on to something else and hi-diddley-dee, an actor's life for me."

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA — When the professional politicians began to analyze which seats in the House of Representatives might be considered "marginal" in next year's elections, they noticed something strange: The list included the 19th congressional district of Texas.

"Marginal district" is a term of art among politicians, referring to a House district where the current occupant is considered vulnerable because he or she received less than 55 per cent of the vote in the last election.

In theory, Texas' 19th district has no place on that list because ever since it was created in 1934 it has been the sole virtually undisputed property of one man — Rep. George H. Mahon, a lanky, soft-spoken Democrat who is the "dean" of the House and chairman of its powerful Appropriations Committee.

Mahon has been elected to 22 consecutive terms, and in 16 of those contests he had no Republican opposition. When the first foolhardy GOP opponent surfaced in 1946, Mahon walked off with 94.6 per cent of the vote. Four years later, he slipped a bit and captured a mere 93.9 per cent of the vote against another hapless Republican.

Three other opponents surfaced in the early 1960s, but only one even came close to gaining a third of the vote in the barren but oil-rich West Texas district whose only sizeable cities are Lubbock, Midland and a portion of Odessa. After handily disposing of that trio of pretenders to the throne, Mahon was reelected without opposition for another five consecutive terms. Last year, the manager of an Odessa brokerage house decided to take his chances against Mahon.

Conservative Republican Jim Reese captured 45.4 per cent of the vote. Mahon, with the remaining 54.6 per cent, plunged overnight from political patriarch of the Permian Basin to "marginal" congressman.

"The big thing was age," says one newspaper reporter who followed the Mahon-Reese contest. "Mahon admits to being 76 and a lot of people suspect he's even older. They just decided it was time for a change."

Early this month, Mahon unexpectedly disclosed that he will retire at the end of his current term. Most of the news accounts of his announcement failed to mention the congressman's little-publicized brush with political defeat.

But Mahon isn't the first House veteran to see the handwriting on the wall. In recent years, several committee chairmen have elected retirement rather than face the potential ignominy of voter rejection in their senior years.

Those who didn't understand that seniority had been transformed from an asset to a liability — men such as Reps. Emanuel Celler of New York and Wayne N. Aspinall of Colorado — suffered the disgrace of defeat.

Others were unceremoniously dumped from their chairmanships by an irreverent group of young legislators. Two once-powerful chairmen — Reps. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas and Wayne L. Hays of Ohio — left town in disgrace after highly publicized scandals.

1. It is a good idea to carry an extra supply of gasoline stored in a safety can in the trunk of your car.
   ☐ True ☐ False
2. There are certain times when it is safe to operate an edger-trimmer or lawn mower with the safety guards removed.
   ☐ True ☐ False

ANSWERS

1. False. Never store gasoline in your car or car trunk. Vapors may filter into the interior of the car, where ignition sources exist. Also, a rear-end collision, even a minor one, may have an explosive reaction.
2. False. Always keep the guards in place and in working order. Never remove them under any circumstances! Keep blades sharp. Keep hands away from cutting area.

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council announced today that Mrs. Les Heise of Malden, has been appointed Membership Extension Worker for the council.

As Membership Extension Worker, Mrs. Heise will work with the Neighborhood Chairmen in the Malden and Gideon Areas to extend Girl Scouting to the Hard to Reach which includes girls of migrant families, blacks, and those that live in outlying rural areas that have not had Girl Scouting. At a later date Mrs. Heise will also work with the Hayti and North Pemiscot Areas.

It is a recognized fact, that Girl Scouting can benefit girls from all social economic levels... from all races but due to the lack of exposure on the parts of parents and on the part of the girls themselves in the Hard to Reach Category, Girl Scouting has not been a viable organization to these young people. Mrs. Heise, the Neighborhood Chairmen and troop leaders will endeavor to reach these girls and help them to understand that Girl Scouting can make a positive influence on their live.

Mrs. Heise comes to this position with years of experience as a volunteer Girl Scout in the Malden area. Her Senior Girl Scout Troop is recognized as one of the most active in the council. She has served as 1st and 2nd Vice President of the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council Board of Directors and chairman of the Migrant Project and Plan of Work Project.She has long been noted for her interest in young people as well as her Girl Scout activities, Mrs. Heise is deeply involved in the child abuse program and the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Projects. Mrs. Heise resides with her husband, Les, in Malden, Mo.

Dear Ann Landers

Wife wants to know her rights

Dear Ann: For seven years I've been married to a man who can't seem to make it financially. I think it must be his lousy personality.

When we were first married we lived in Herb's home town because he worked for his dad. The business was crawling with relatives. Herb's dad died the following year and the usual family in-fighting began. I hated the town (nothing but hicks) and was glad when Herb agreed to accept a job in another city.

To make a long story short, he was transferred four times in six years and each place was worse than the last.

Yesterday Herb got a call from his brother. He has bought out the other relatives and wants us to come back to the hick town. Herb will be a part-owner and vice president of the business.

I hate the town. There is not one person there I'd care to associate with. Shouldn't a wife have something to say about where the family lives? Doesn't she have SOME rights? Please answer soon. I am -- Mad, Mad, Mad

Dear M, M, M: Yes, a wife has some rights. But with rights come obligations -- and one of those obligations is to make a home wherever her husband can make a living.

I suspect someone in your family has a "lousy personality," but I don't think it's Herb. If you consider people "hicks," they know it. Small wonder you have no friends.

Defrost, kiddo. Learn to give. Make up your mind you're going to contribute something to the community. Small towns can be great fun. (I know.) Your husband needs a hand -- not a foot. It's not the towns you've been living in -- it's you.

Dear Ann: After two years of anonymous letters to others, about us, and many anonymous phone calls (which we taped) we were shocked to discover that they were perpetrated by a relative of some people we know.

Legal action (for which we have proof) would be expensive, exhausting and embarrassing. We are pleading with this person, for God's sake, get some help for yourself. What you are doing is a symptom of mental illness. If you continue we may have to call the police and we don't want to. Sign us -- Compassionate And Understanding

Dear Compassionate: Thousands of people who read your letter will feel uncomfortable. They will wonder if you mean THEM.

I hope every person who is ill at ease will assume he (or she) has been discovered and take your advice. The poison pens and telephone creeps are sickies and they need professional help.

Dear Ann Landers: I was divorced from my husband for 12 years. He passed away recently. Can I refer to myself as his widow? Would it be legal? Please answer in the paper. I've had a lot of arguments over this. -- Bay City

Dear Bay: I am not a lawyer and cannot give legal advice. If it's a common-sense answer you want I would say, "No." A widow is a woman whose husband has died. The man who died was not your husband.

It goes without saying that if he remarried, you should not refer to yourself socially as his widow. That title belongs to another.

Forsch blanks Houston

ST. LOUIS (AP) — J. R. Richard's version of summer heat restricted the St. Louis Cardinals to four hits Thursday night, but each one counted.

In fact, on one of the few occasions Richard elected to ease the throttle the Cards' Keith Hernandez proved ready and dented the Houston Astros right-hander for a home run.

"I was standing there with the bat on my shoulder thinking, 'This time ol' J. R. is going to change up," said an impish Hernandez in joking tones.

"That fouled up the book a little," mused Hernandez, a fast ball hitter whose drive in the second inning triggered a 4-0 St. Louis victory.

Hernandez' blow, his first homer since June 21, helped decided a pitching duel between the 6-foot-8 Richard, 9-7, and Cards right-hander Bob Forsch, 12-4, who walked five but permitted only three Astros hits.

"I don't know what it was. Sometimes I was standing out there and I just didn't feel good," said Forsch. "I guess I just wasn't concentrating. I wanted to keep them off the bases, because they're a pretty good running team."

Forsch, relying on a lively fast ball, held Houston hitless until former teammate Jose Cruz sliced a double with two out in the fourth inning.

Meanwhile Hernandez' blast represented the only St. Louis hit until Garry Templeton singled, stole second base and scored on two grounders in the Cards' fourth.

Forsch became Richard's sixth strikeout victim to start the sixth but Jerry Mumphrey followed with a single and also swiped second.

"I was happy to get them," conceded Simmons of the RBI, which boosted his season's total to 61. "J. R. was throwing everything."

The shutout was the seventh of his career for Forsch, who also permitted singles by Cruz and Enos Cabell in the sixth and eighth innings en route to his fifth complete game.

"Both of them pitched good," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon in evaluating the performances of Richard, who entered the game with a streak of 22 1-3 scoreless innings, and Forsch.

"Forsch pitched better, I guess," said Virdon. "He was better than at any time before we've seen him."

Hrabosky gets his way

Rapp gets new contract

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Reliever Al Hrabosky says a lengthy discussion with St. Louis Cardinals Manager Vern Rapp may have paid dividends after all.

While the Cards' pilot at first seemed unwilling to back off, the exchange last week paved the way to the relaxation Thursday of a rule prohibiting Hrabosky's flamboyant mustache and beard.

An announcement of the rules modification was contained in a statement club board chairman August A. Busch Jr., presented Hrabosky and later read at a news conference.

At the same time, Busch backed his manager with a vote of confidence by extending his one-year contract through the 1978 season.

"Vern has my utmost confidence and that of Bing Devine (executive vice president)," said Busch. "With all the troubles he's been having, he still has a contending club."

Busch, while reading the statement he had presented Hrabosky, noted, "You said in the newspaper that you can only get batters out by being psyched out with your mustache and beard.

"Then go ahead and grow it but, boy, are you going to look like a fool if you don't get batters out," the statement said.

"By taking this course of action to make you happy, we will have the great Al Hrabosky defying everyone, saying to his teammates, 'I'm more important than you.' To me this is childish, and I hope you see it that way."

Busch, who was flanked at the news conference by Rapp and Devine, said the decision to modify the rule was effective immediately and pertained to all team players.

"They (beards and mustaches) are allowed for the balance of the season," said the 78-year-old club owner. "We will examine the situation after the season and decide on next year."

That breach was sealed through a club meeting but opened anew in mid-May when Hrabosky, after refusing to meet with Rapp, was suspended for 48 hours.

Hrabosky said the final showdown between himself and his manager began building up after the two met in Philadelphia last week.

Cowens helps beat Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Al Cowens was ignored when it came to picking American League All Stars.

But the Kansas City outfielder was hard to ignore Thursday night at Tiger Stadium — as was the pitching of Paul Splittorff.

Cowens went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs, while Splittorff fired a four-hitter, leading the Royals to an 8-1 drubbing of Detroit.

"I would rather play in a World Series than an All-Star game, anyway," said Cowens, who raised his batting average seven points to .311, his home run count to 15 and his runs-batted-in total to a career-high 63.

The victory was the seventh consecutive for Kansas City, which has won 12 of its last 14 and 24 of 31. The second-place Royals moved to within two games of idle Chicago in the West Division.

"There's no doubt in my mind we'll catch Chicago," Cowens said matter-of-factly.

The sixth-place Tigers are 12 games out of first in the East heading into tonight's rematch. They're scheduled to send hard-luck pitcher Fernando Arroyo (5-9) against hot Royals starter Dennis Leonard (9-9) — who has won five of his last six starts. He has a 1.58 earned-run-average over the span.

Splittorff gave up a pair of singles in the third inning, then just two bunt singles the rest of the way as he posted only his third complete game in 22 starts.

He got all the runs he needed in the second inning when John Mayberry followed Cowens' leadoff single with his 15th homer of the year, a towering drive into the upper deck in right field.

Cowens added his 15th of the season in the next inning off starter Dave Roberts, 5-9, after an RBI double by Hal McRae.

Cowens singled in one run in the fifth and two in the sixth off Steve Grilli, giving him the first five-RBI game of his major league career.

"I don't know what kind of year I'm capable of having," the soft-spoken Cowens said.

Tiger Manager Ralph Houk didn't quite know how to assess what went wrong with Roberts, who hasn't won in his last six starts.

Detroit's lone run was unearned, thanks ironically to rightfielder Cowens in the third. He lost a Ron LeFlore fly ball in the lights for an error, sandwiched between singles by Tom Veryzer and Tito Fuentes.

Bi-State season coming to close

A non-league game scheduled for tonight between the Cape Capahas and Sikeston Saints at Capaha Park has been cancelled by mutual consent. Both teams will be involved in the Bi-State League playoffs next week and both need to wrap up their league seasons this weekend.

"We've got that doubleheader on Sunday," a Sikeston team spokesman pointed out. "Then there's a game Monday at VFW and Wednesday on the road and possibly the league playoffs starting in between. Both sides decided it would be easier on the pitching not to play."

Sikeston hosts Perryville Sunday afternoon in a 1 p.m. doubleheader to finish the league season. Scheduled starting pitchers are tentatively Glen Alexander (4-1) in the nine-inning first game and Ricky Taylor (2-0) in the seven-inning nightcap.

A double win would enable the Sikeston squad to better last year's 11-9 record (they're 10-8 now) and finish second for the second straight year. Although league standings are not official until all teams have completed and reported their games, a 12-8 finish would reportedly tie Sikeston with Anna for the runnerup spot.

Goff unusual athlete

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) — Talk not of money hungry athletes when discussing former University of Georgia quarterback Ray Goff.

Goff gave the Denver Broncos a $1,000 refund when it became apparent that he was not going to make the National Football League team.

"My dad always taught me not to take things for nothing," Goff said. "A lot of people think I'm crazy to give that much money back. But I didn't go up there looking for something free. I didn't do anything to earn a $1,000."

So now he is back in Moultrie—with a gas station he and a friend opened this week—and planning to help coach the Georgia football teams this year.

Goff led the Bulldogs to 9-3 and 10-2 seasons the last two years, but he was a running quarterback and not noted for his passing. Thus he was ignored in the NFL draft and made it to Denver as a free agent, signing for the standard $1,000 free agent bonus.

After five days in the Broncos' training camp, it became apparent that his passing was not up to NFL standards. Denver's coaches told him to work on his passing or try and make the team as a defensive back.

Being Reggie Jackson is tough job

Good looking, intelligent, articulate and rich, Jackson should have the key to this city. Instead he is being locked out. The fans boo him, his teammates don't understand him and his manager wants to punch him.

Insulted at home games and taunted on the road, he is a man without a city. As the object of hate wherever he goes, the parallel with Jackie Robinson 30 years ago seems valid.

Robinson was not accepted by many players and fans because he was the first black. In some circles, color has a bearing on why Jackson's fan club does not need a big room for its meetings. But for the average fan who looks at statistics rather than skin, the criticism goes deeper. Jackson is not playing or acting like a $2.9 million player.

It is that simple.

"Nine out of 10 guys would love his statistics," said Sal Bando of Milwaukee, Jackson's friend dating back to their championship days in Oakland. "I wouldn't sell him short. With all the pressure he's under, I think he's having an outstanding year."

Bando, a free agent, signed in mellow Milwaukee, the center of middle America. Expectations run lower there, and Bando, who signed a $1.4 million contract for five years, says he has not been booed at home—even though he has had his troubles at the plate.

Jackson, batting .286 with 16 home runs, 50 runs batted in and a team-leading nine game-winning hits, was the only Yankee booed in Thursday night's doubleheader with the Brewers. He has now come to accept negativism from the fans.

The low point may have come Tuesday night. Booed in his own ballpark in the All-Star Game, Jackson tried winning over the fans—as he often does—by signing autographs late into the night. Weary and mentally drained, Jackson excused himself from the autograph session.

Jackson, who was with his parents and girl friend, then was subjected to a stream of profanities from some of the kids. Jackson couldn't take it anymore. He chased one 13-year-old, but never caught him, he said.

The teen-ager claimed he was roughed up by Jackson, a charge that has been refuted by several eyewitnesses. A good deed by Jackson had turned into another nightmare.

But Jackson hasn't been entirely blameless. In his first season with the American League champions, Jackson was quoted in Sport magazine as saying only he could be the team leader, not Thurman Munson, last year's Most Valuable Player in the AL and the team captain.

"The Munson article was out of bounds," Jackson now admits. "Everything else I have done, I would do the same."

That apparently includes the time he hit a home run and refused to shake his teammates' hands. And last month, Yankees Manager Billy Martin and Jackson had words, then almost got into a fight during a nationally televised game in Boston.

Trevino predicts lead won't stand

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino was the first to predict that his first-round lead in the $225,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship would not stand up.

"It's like my little boy said," Trevino quoted. "There's two things that won't last: a dog that chases cars and a pro that misses greens."

Trevino missed more than his share of greens Thursday, but he saved things with what he called "the best putting round I've ever had.

"In all the years I've played golf, and I've played golf for a lot of years in a lot of tournaments, that's the best putting round I've ever had.

"I didn't shoot 67. I putted 67. From where I hit the ball, I should have had about a 72. And it would have been a good 72, not an easy one.

"I've got to start hitting the ball better if I hope to do anything."

Trevino, trying to rebuild his game following major back surgery last winter, one-putted 11 times and once holed a 45-footer to save par on his way to the five-under-par effort that put him one stroke in front of nine players tied at 68.

Heading that group was Jack Nicklaus, designed of the tough, hilly, leg-straining 7,090-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course that is being played for the first time and will be a permanent site for this national championship.

Nicklaus, who has yet to win the Canadian title, shared the No. 2 spot with Bruce Lietzke and Tom Purtzer, each of whom had two eagles on his back nine, George Archer, Tom Kite, Mike Morley, George Cadle, Jimmy Wittenberg and rookie Jeff Mitchell.

Trevino, whose rags-to-riches saga includes five major championships and a blitz of the American, British and Canadian national titles in 1971, has had to restructure his game following the surgery. And he hasn't won in more than a year.

Softball tourney continues

The Benton Aces whipped Purkey's Restaurant 4-2 and Steward Steel held off Poplar Bluff in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Tournament being held at the Sikeston Sports Complex. Purkey's and Poplar Bluff go into the loser's brack of the double elimination tournament because of the losses.

Larry Steimle picked up the Benton win with a four-hitter in the first game. Dale Lane had the biggest Purkey's hit, a double. The winning Benton team could only manage five hits, but bunched them together for the four runs.

Steward Steel and Poplar Bluff were tied 5-5 when a run scored on a fielder's choice in the top of the fourth. Relief pitcher Vernie Deene, who got the win, drove in an insurance run in the fifth inning with a single.

Tonight there are three games on tap at the complex: Charleston opposes Bank of Sikeston, starting at 6:30 p.m. The 8 o'clock game pits Security National Bank against the SFPSL '77 champion Eagles team. And, at 9:30 Dexter will take on Eby's.

Denny stays on disabled list indefinitely

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Right-handed pitcher John Denny, injured June 21 during a game at Los Angeles, will remain on the St. Louis Cardinals' disabled list for an indefinite period, the National League club said Thursday night.

The 6-foot-3 Denny, who has a 7-2 record, suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his left leg. He was placed on the 21-day disabled list four days later.

Atkinson trial to jury

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A six-person federal court jury was expected to start deliberation today of George Atkinson's $2 million slander suit against the Pittsburgh Steelers and their coach, Chuck Noll.

On Thursday, the jury was told there was no doubt Noll was trying to damage Atkinson when he linked the Oakland Raiders' veteran defensive back to a "criminal element" in professional football.

"Mr. Noll was nobody's dummy," attorney Willie Brown said in final arguments. "He knew what he was saying. There is no question he had in mind doing serious damage to Mr. Atkinson's reputation. He showed absolute reckless disregard as to what might happen to Mr. Atkinson in his career."

James MacInnis, the Steelers' attorney, said Noll's explanation of what he meant by "criminal element" — those who wantonly break the rules — shows that his words were "aptly applied and correctly used."

Atkinson is seeking a million dollars each from the Steelers and Noll because of remarks the Steelers' coach made following a Steeler-Raider game last September.

Card gate goes over a million

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Paid attendance of 15,743 for a game Thursday night against the Houston Astros boosted St. Louis Cardinals gate admissions over the million mark for the 15th consecutive season.

The Cards, who have played 48 of their 80 home dates, have drawn 1,011,993 fans, pushing them over the million mark for the 22nd time since 1946.

Joe Namath, acquired from the New York Jets two months ago, tries his famed arm as he began the first day of Los Angeles Ram training camp drills at Fullerton, California, Monday. He's recovering from a rib-cage pull, but told newsmen the injury is about 90 percent healed. Namath is 34. (AP Wirephoto)

LL tourney winners advance

Rotary moved into the championship game of the Sikeston Little City Tournament in Musial League as they squeaked past the Daily Standard 6-5. It was a seesaw battle that was tied four of the six innings. The game was finally won as Billy Pennington rapped a base loaded single in the home half of the sixth to drive Stan Templeton home for the winner.

In the second game, Orlando Stewart of Meredith Realty and Brian Self of Collins Construction locked horns in an exciting pitching duel. Meredith did score three in the top of the fourth that gave them enough to win 6-3. Orlando allowed Collins only two hits while Self gave up only four. Stewart got the win which puts Meredith into the championship game against Rotary. Self was visibly tired and didn'thave his usual control. This and the lack of key hits made him the loser.

Stan Templeton got his third win in four days for Rotary while Rod Anderson got the loss. At first, it looked like Anderson might be the winner as firstbaseman Dennis Huckaba of the Daily Standard sent a two run homer over the left field fence, the first Musial league home run of the year. However, solid pitching and good fielding eventually allowed Rotary to win.

The two suprise teams of the tournament battled it in American league action as Bridger ripped First National 10-0. David Peridore tossed a one hit shutout for Bridger as well banging out a triple to spark his club. Rusty Crismon got the loss for First National as well as their lone hit.

In the second game, Moore's Firestone beat second place Ryan 8-5. Moore's outhit Ryan 8-5 and a triple by Winner Jamie Cowell provided the necessary power for the upset. Scott Bogle was hung with the loss for Ryan. The loss by Ryan means that the three top teams in the American league will not be in the finals of the tournament.

Pizza Inn is now one game away from a clean sweep as they downed Kiwanis a close one, 3-1. Pizza Inn could manage only three in the second, but it was enough as Todd Baker pitched another fine game. Baker was the winner for Pizza Inn and Brooks Sherman got the loss for the Kiwanis.

Lions continued to score the big run when they needed it as they nipped Security National Bank 7-5. With the score knotted at five in the sixth, Lions got two to take the lead. In the bottom of the sixth, Security loaded the bases and it looked like the game might go into extra innings. With two out, the batter hit a screamer up the middle that had base hit written on it. Shortstop David Braden of Lions mad a great play on the ball and simply stepped on second to end the game. Marland Beaudean was the winner and Dennis Sanders the loser for Security National.

Many Names Dropped In Cassini Book

I'D DO IT ALL OVER AGAIN. By Igor Cassini with Jeanne Molli. Putnam. 266 Pages. $8.95.

What do you do if you're no longer "Cholly Knickerbocker," longtime gossip columnist for the Hearst chain, but still have a lot of famous names to drop?

Igor and his brother, Oleg, were born into an aristocratic Russian family — their grandfather was Czarist ambassador to Washington — but fled the revolution and grew up in Italy, where they were both tennis champs.

Arriving in the United States, the two young Counts Cassini made names for themselves in different fields. Oleg, who was for a time married to film star Gene Tierney, became a designer, eventually creating clothes for First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy.

The book is full of inside stories of the famous and notorious but it's sometimes difficult to keep track of who was married to whom — when. So many names are dropped, in fact, that the index covers 10 pages.

BY MAXINE NEECE

My Sister and I were very close to each other and shared many things of beauty both natural and spiritual but the spiritual remain foremost in my mind. For she was a person who truly walked with God and out of her inner-most being flowed rivers of life. Those whoknew her after the knew Jesus Christ, for he ...bited her very being. There was an aroura about her and she glowed with a light from within.

One of her favorite scriptures as Matthew Chapter 13 where Jesus told the parable of the sower and then He said, "He who has ears to hear, let him be listening and consider and perceive and comprehend by hearing what the Spirit is saying"

My Sister's Life was a parable-she died that those she loved might have their eyes opened to see and their ears opened to hear the mysteries of God. For with the opening of the eyes we gain understanding and with the opening of the ears we gain knowledge and when knowledge and understanding come together they bring wisdom to the heart of man. And when wisdom has done a perfect work God will rule and reign in the hearts of men.

What is God? or Who is God? Many man ask in their blindness but when their eyes and ears are opened they begin to see; God is Love, and Joy and Peace and Wisdom and Knowledge and Understanding and all the Beauty a heart could ever imagin.

Helen's husband was a farmer. He broke up the hardened ground year after year and planted seeds which died in the earth to bring forth life in the time of harvest.

Helen was also a sower of the seeds of life. Everywhere she went she sowed seeds-some fell by the roadside, some fell on rocky ground, some fell among thorns, but some fell on good soil and will yield a harvest.

If you have eyes to see and ears to hear you will understand -"She died that hardened hearts might be broken so that the seeds of life might take root and grow in each of you who loved her and whom she loved".

Her life was not in vain, neither was her death in vain; For it was a parable of sowing and reaping. Jesus said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit.

Her life has been sown as a seed in the ground and great will be the Harvest.

not with the stink," said George Finley, 55, a welfare father of five, whose trailer home in nearby Huff was washed away.

"What are you supposed to do when you lose everything and you didn't have nothinv to start with?" asked his wife Alberta as she packed the children in an old blue station wagon for the ride to a friend's home.

While some people packed, state troopers used billy clubs to poke for bodies in waist-high mud the consistency of pudding in nearby Seward, where water washed away as many as 50 mobile homes.

A relief center in Armagh listed two dozen persons missing in Seward, and the list was growing.

Another 25 persons were reported missing in West Taylor Township where an earthen dam burst and washed away at least 10 homes as neighbors watched in horror.

"I was in the Second World War, in Korea and in 'Nam," said Bethlehem Steel Corp. machinist Rudy Dragovich, 52, as he looked over the small shattered town below broken Laurel Run Dam.

"But watching my friends die, that seemed like the worst war of all."

Sporadic communication continued to hamper efforts to locate missing persons, and Gov. Milton Shapp, after a tour, ordered the National Guard to install manned radio units at all 11 mass care center.

Blood drive hours are from noon until 6 p.m. and parking will be available behind the nurse's residence and in the parking lot of the First Christian Church. Signs will be posted to direct donors to the parking areas.

Jones said the blood-giving process will take from 30 to 45 minutes and there will be adequate personnel at the station to handle all donors.

"It's a gift of love from one person to another," he remarked.

Under the Red Cross program, persons being treated at one of the hospitals in the region must pay only the administrative cost of receiving the blood. The Red Cross will make arrangements to replace units of blood used to treat patients living in its region in a non-member hospital if the hospital will accept the blood.

Although the Red Cross would probably not withdraw its blood supplies from the hospital if the obligation of the community is not met, the people of the area have a responsibility to put their share of blood back into the system, Jones said.

"Whatever blood is used byithe people in Southeast Missouri must be supplied by the people in Southeast Missouri," Jones said.

Dr. Rosenstein says first-time donors, which any blood drive hopes to attract in addition to persons who have given blood before, tend to be hesitant to donate.

While some care must be taken not to over-exert yourself following a blood donation, Dr. Rosenstein said the body has its own system for replacing the blood donated and problems seldom arise.

The body will replace the blood volume within 24 hours of a donation. The red cells take more time and are usually replaced within a five-week period. The hemoglobin count only drops to about eight per cent, he said, which is not low enough to present any problems.

When a donor enters the donor station, he registers, giving data about himself. An interview follows in which the donor's medical history is recorded and he is then taken to the examination area where his blood pressure, pulse and other items are checked.

The actual withdrawal of blood takes from five to 10 minutes and is done by registered nurses trained by the Red Cross. This is followed by a short rest period on the table and then the donor receives some type of fluid as a refreshment.

Some persons, such as anyone who has had hepatitis, or has severe heart disease, are ineligible to give blood. Anyone 17-years-old needs the written consent of parents to be a donor.

A general rule to follow is that if you are from 17 to 65 years old and in good health, you are able to give blood.

The special blood drive is a community project endorsed by Missouri Delta Community Hospital. Jones says the hospital has had a much more effective system of obtaining blood under the Red Cross Program and says blood from commercial banks tends to have a higher incidence of hepatitis.

Liquor division barred from grocery game ban

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A temporary injunction was issued today prohibiting the state Division of Liquor Control from penalizing food markets with liquor licenses because they are operating bingo-type games for their customers.

Judge James Riley of the Cole County Circuit Court said in the order that based on petitions from attorneys for more than 200 grocery stores and four hours of court testimony last week, he found that the markets "would suffer irreparable harm, loss and damage if this temporary injunction were not issued."

The order means that the stores can continue operating the games without fear of having their liquor licenses suspended or revoked until further action is taken by the court.

Judge Riley set no date for a full hearing on whether to make the order permanent.

Liquor Control Supervisor Albert Letz had advised the stores in June to halt the game because he believed operation of it could violate two liquor regulations. One prohibits operation of lotteries by businesses licensed to sell liquor and the other prohibits advertising promotions in conjunction with advertisements for liquor.

At the hearing last Friday, Letz testified that based on the investigations his office has already made, he feels the games do violate those regulations. Violations would subject the stores to either suspension or revocation of their liquor licenses.

But attorneys for the stores and the company that developed the games, claiming they had received assurances from the state earlier this year that the games were legal, said none of the advertisements for the bingo games ever included ads for liquor and that the game did not constitute a lottery.

They also said grocery store officials had attempted to revise some provisions of the advertisements to meet objections of state officials.

If Letz were allowed to penalize the stores, food market officials have said they would halt the games, costing them not only more than $250,000 but also the good will of their customers.

1. Where is the safest place in a house during a tornado alert?
2. Gasoline and flammable liquids can safely be stored in your house, even in a safety can.
☐ True ☐ False

ANSWERS

1. The basement offers the greatest safety. In houses without basements, protection should be sought in the center part of the structure on the lowest floor. Keep windows wide open, but stay away from them. A small interior room, such as a bathroom or closet, may be best.
2. False. Gasoline and flammable liquids should never be stored in your house, but away from living quarters in a cool, well-ventilated area in a UL Listed container — keep away from children, as well.

Doctors develop heart gauge

COLUMBIA -- Doctors at the University of Missouri-Columbia Medical Center and Truman Veterans Hospital are helping develop a new method of gauging a heart's pumping action. The method could determine whether a heart attack victim needs surgery. In the next two or three years, doctors say it could replace conventional cardiac catheterization techniques.

This new process, known as Gated Cardia Blood Pool Imaging (GCBPI), involves injecting radioactive dye into a vein in a patient's arm. The blood flow carries the dye into the heart. Doctors can then use a computerized machine similar to a Geiger counter to determine how efficiently the heart pumps blood to other parts of the body.

In catheterization, dye is injected into the heart itself by a hollow tube that is threaded through an artery into the heart.

"Several research projects have gone into developing this new process," said Dr. Masood Ahmad, a cardiologist at Truman Veterans Hospital. "No one person is responsible for developing it. We're looking for a noninvasive method of measuring heart patterns that would replace heart catheterization." Research to help perfect the process is supported by funds from the Missouri Heart Association.

Dr. Ahmad told a group of 40 Heart Association fund-raising volunteers at their annual meeting in Columbia in June that GCBPI has several potential benefits over cardiac catheterization. The patient is not exposed to the discomfort and risk of minor surgery, and also receives less radiation. It is less costly and more convenient for the patient since this method does require him to be hospitalized.

GCBPI has potential applications in all areas of cardiac diagnosis. But cardiologists are hopeful that it will play a major role in the diagnosis of a ventricular aneurysm and its severity. An aneurysm is a bulging out of the heart muscle wall, caused when scar tissue that forms following a major heart attack is not strong enough to resist the pressure within the heart. The heart with an aneurysm may become inefficient at pumping blood. Blood that normally would be pushed into arteries backs up into the lungs. The lungs then become congested, causing the patient to become short of breath.

About 20 per cent of heart attack patients develop aneurysms, but most do not cause problems that are serious enough to be corrected surgically. And not all patientts who are operated on for aneurysms benefit from the operation. A procedure developed in 1975 by Medical Center cardiologists allows physicians to be selective as to which patients will benefit from surgery. By measuring the volume of blood in the aneurysm, and that pumped by the remainder of the heart, the function of the heart after the aneurysm has been removed can be predicted. Heart catheterization and X-ray techniques are required for this procedure, which is now used in many medical centers around the country. Medical Center cardiologists hope that the GCBPI process may replace cardiac catheterization in the exploration of ventricular aneurysms.

Cardia care facilities at the Vaterans Hospital and the Medical Center were toured by the Heart Association volunteers, as they followed the case history of a man who had undergone surgical treatment for ventricular aneurysms at the Medical Center in November, 1975.

Russell Metzger, a 75-year-old farmer from Moberly, had a massive heart attack in February, 1975, and three months later, developed two large aneurysms on the left side of his heart. Using the method developed at the Medical Center, in doctors found that he would benefit from removal of the aneurysms, and that one of the aneurysms was of a very rare type which was about to rupture.

"I think I'm a pretty lucky old boy to be alive today," Metzger said at the Heart Association meeting. "I'm on top of the world."

In the future, the medical center and Veterans Hospital cardiologists hope that many persons like Metzger will benefit from the measurement of heart volume and from the GCBPI process.

"Behind advances like these which have been developed here are years of basic research by many investigators," Dr. Richard Martin, director of the division of cardiology and Metzger's cardiologist at the Medical Center, told the Heart Association volunteers. "Without the knowledge obtained from basic research over the years, we would not have the practical applications which you have seen here today."

Bad security system makes fraud possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security for a nationwide communications system linked to government computers is so poor that a private insurance company could file false claims for federal welfare checks and go undetected, federal auditors say.

Thirty-three federal agencies have 2,190 terminals on the Advanced Record System, which auditors from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said has serious weaknesses.

"Security procedures and controls over data transmitted through the ARS network need to be strengthened to prevent use of the system for unauthorized purposes," an audit said.

The communications system, run by the General Services Administration, receives messages from agencies' terminals and sends them to their proper designations.

For instance, a claim for Supplemental Security Income, federal welfare for the aged, is filed at a local Social Security office. The request for payment would be typed on a terminal and transmitted to the computer system, which in turn would send it to the Social Security computer in Baltimore.

But the system cannot tell which terminal is sending a message. A deliberate attempt to disguise a terminal's identity can succeed.

The auditors used a terminal in Washington, but not a Social Security terminal, to test the system with requests for Supplemental Security Income claims directed at the main Social Security computer.

"We found that the SSA computer rejected the messages when the sending terminal's (codes) were used. However, when the (codes) of an SSA field office were used, the message was accepted and the ... claim was established and processed for payment," the audit said.

The audit, released by Reps. John Moss, D-Calif., and Charles R,se, D-N.C., did not say fraudulent claims had been entered in this manner, only that it could be done.

The Social Security Administration said in response on the audit that its procedures should prevent issuance of checks based on such false entries. But the agency admitted its procedures are not foolproof.

The agency is the largest user of the system, employing about 1,200 terminals for Social Security, SSI, Medicare and other programs.

Some private insurance companies which help administer Medicare at the state level have terminals hooked to the system.

The Social Security Administration said it is trying to plug the holes in the system.

Taking A Substitute

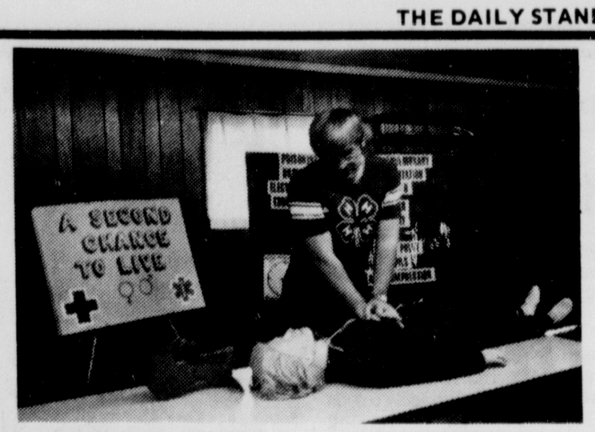
For those mildly interested in Las Vegas but with no great desire to go to the neon city to satisfy that yen, Mario Puzo's "Inside Las Vegas" ought to prove a satisfactory substitute.

Puzo, author of the best-selling "The Godfather," tells in chatty, relaxed, anecdote-loaded prose everything anyone could possibly want to know about Las Vegas and his text is reinforced as well as envlivened by an abundance of photographs — both in black and white and in color — that are largely excellent.

Starting out as a dusty little town with little to recommend it, as Puzo tells it, Las Vegas has had an amazing growth in recent years due, of course, to the fact that it has legalized gambling. There is, says Puzo, no other reason for its existence. "It is a desert in the middle of nowhere. It has no virtues of climate or natural resources. It has no ancient history or scenery to beguile the tourist," And yet, "In 1975 over nine million people visited Las Vegas."

Why all these people went to Las Vegas is one part of Puzo's narrative. Acting as counterpoint, is Puzo's description of the people who live in Las Vegas and earn their living from the money left in the area by the visitors.



Demonstrating cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), an emergency lifesaving procedure, on life-size manikin is Jim Castelaw of Griffin, Ga., a 1975 national winner in the 4-H health program supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, gives 4-H members opportunities to learn CPR and other practical self-help skills.

4-H'ers Master CPR: 'Second Chance To Live'

CHICAGO—More than 650,000 Americans die suddenly each year of heart attacks, choking, poisoning, drowning, smoke inhalation or other causes. For some of these victims, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) might have meant a "second chance to live."

CPR is an emergency lifesaving procedure performed by an individual to provide artificial breathing and blood circulation for a person whose own breathing mechanism and heart have stopped.

4-H members who are about 14 years of age or older and of sufficient size and ability may be able to learn CPR techniques from a qualified instructor at 4-H camps, during club meetings or in other 4-H activities.

CPR is one of several self-help skills emphasized in the national 4-H health program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Eli Lilly and Company. The program gives 4-H'ers learn-by-doing opportunities to develop skills in first aid, exercise, diet and nutrition, disease prevention and control, and eye, dental and foot care.

Projects and activities also encourage an understanding of health-related environmental issues, such as pollution and sanitation control, and stimulate young people 9-19 to broaden their outlook by making contact with members of other generations. 4-H'ers discover where community health facilities are located, what services they provide and when to seek the services of a health care professional.

For outstanding accomplishments by health program members, Eli Lilly offers awards ranging from seven $800 scholarships at the national level to four medals of honor per county. One boy or girl in each state receives an expense-paid trip to the 56th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 1.

Winners are chosen by the Extension Service, and awards are arranged and announced by National 4-H Council. More information on the program is available from county extension agents.

Slavin term on PSC could be short-lived

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Consumr advocate Alberta Slavin could wind up serving one of the shortest terms in recent years as a member of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Gov. Joseph Teasdale named Mrs. Slavin to the $28,000-a-year post July 8, and she began her tenure on the five-member commission July 13.

However, her controversial appointment will come up for confirmation by the Missouri Senate at the scheduled special legisltive session Aug. 10, which Teasdale called last week to settle the deadlock over a new state prison.

The 47-year-old St. Louis County housewife and mother of four is expected to face tough opposition in the Senate, where several senators have said she is too anti-utility.

Although Teadale has declined to say he was confident she would be confirmed, the governor has pledged to fight for her confirmation.

For her part, Mrs. Slavin has said she was prepared for Senate rejection, but would "do my duty as I see it," despite the open hostility of some of the senators.

But as the situation was summed up by Senate Majority Leader John Schneider, D-St. Louis: "She's either approved during this special session or that's it."

Schneider pointed to the already announced opposition from several senators and said Mrs. Slavin faced a couple of hurdles before the full chamber would even take a final vote on her appointment.

"Her first step is the Gubernatorial Appointments Committee," said Schneider, adding that the committee's approval was an essential ingredient for final Senate approval.

Along with that, Mrs. Slavin must also have a senator sponsor her appointment, which is a traditional Senate courtesy.

"Her appointment could die for lack of a sponsor," Schneider added.

Republican Sen. A. Clifford Jones of Ladue has suggested Mrs. Slavin's appointment could come to the Senate floor for a full vote without the Appointment Committee's okay.

The senators could take care of her appointment in much the same way as they handled the 1975 nomination of Rodney Miller to the commission by former Gov. Christopher Bond. In that instance, the appointments panel turned down Bond's choice of Miller, but the committee sent the matter to the floor, where the Seanate later rejected it.

Some senators have raised questions about Mrs. Slavin's initial plans to continue living at her Clayton home, which is in Jones' district, and commute to Jefferson City for her PSC job.

Traditionally, the senator in whose district the appointee resides sponsors the appointment before the Senate, but Jones said he was opposed to Mrs. Slavin serving on the commission.

"But I would vote against her," he added. "I have never voted for a utility hater or a utility lover."

Jones said under state law, a commissioner must live in Jefferson City, so he considered the matter "all up in the air" until Mrs. Slavin's residency was settled.

She is currently looking for a residence in the capital city.

However, Sen. Ralph Uthlaut, R-New Florence, whose district includes Jefferson City, said he was against Mrs. Slavin's appointment to the PSC.

Uthlaut said the public service commissioners were not selected so they could serve as "to champion a cause or crusade."

Even though Uthlaut said he opposed her appointment, he said "I'm not saying I would not sponsor her."

Dedication service set for Christian Center

A dedication service for Sikesotn Christian Center, 210 E. Center St., will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The service will feature music by the Gospel Tones and a dedication sermon by an as yet unannounced guest speaker.

Sikeston Christian Center is a new meeting place where youth of the area can congregate for fun, fellowship and Christian guidance.

The center came into being last month through the efforts of several concerned adults interested in seeing that the youth of the community have a place to meet in a Christian atmosphere. One side of a former store building was rented and refurnished, and John Braddock was hired as a counselor to supervise the center.

In addition to providing a meeting place for games and recreation, the center hosts a weekly praise service at 7:30 each Thursday evening featuring music groups and guest speakers.

The Rev. Stan and Sherry Welch of Eminence will be the evangelists for revival services to be conducted at 7:30 each evening Sunday through July 31 at the Morehouse Assembly of God Church, the Rev. R. A. McAnulty, pastor, has announced.

LCMS action may split ALC ties

DALLAS (AP) — Action taken by delegates to the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod here will probably lead to a split with its sister denomination, the American Lutheran Church (ALC), according to an ALC official.

"It seems almost inevitable that there will be a total split," said Herb David, a lay official from Minneapolis.

The Missouri Synod convention, which runs through Friday, voted Tuesday to declare a state of "fellowship in protest" with the ALC.

The resolution allows the 2.8 million-member Missouri Synod Lutherans to exchange pulpits with the ALC and participate in ALC communion, but it calls for a panel to report to the next convention for reconsideration of the fellowship status. The two Lutheran bodies entered into fellowship in 1969.

The resolution specifies doctrinal disagreement with the ALC in the areas of Scripture interpretation, ordination of women, nature and basis of fellowship and participation in ecumenical functions.

David said the ALC feels there is room for some diversity in fellowship. He noted that ordination of women in the ALC has progressed "quietly" with a minimum of in-house squabbling.

The Missouri Synod calls for agreement in doctrine and practice before it can enter into fellowship, said the Rev. Sam Naszger, executive secretary of the committee that proposed the protest resolution.

However, Dr. Arnold Nickelson, general secretary of the ALC, said his demonination calls only for belief in the Bible and the Lutheran confessions as fellowship prerequisites.

Successor to Helmsing named

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The appointment of the Most Rev. John J. Sullivan as bishop of the Kansas City-St. Joseph Catholic Diocese was announced today by the Vatican, the diocesan office in Kansas City reported.

Bishop Sullivan, 57, is a native of Horton, Kan., who spent most of his church career in Oklahoma. He has been head of the Grand Island, Neb., diocese the past five years.

He succeeds the Most Rev. Charles Helmsing, whose resignation was accepted last week. Bishop Helmsing, 69, said he asked in November to be relieved as head of the diocese for health reasons.

Morley church to host gospel meeting series

MORLEY -- A series of gospel meetings will be conducted July 28-31 at the Church of Christ. The meetings will begin at 7:30 on weekday evenings and at 10:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Bob Pipes of Rolla will be the evangelist.

Lilbourn church to Host Bible school next week

LILBOURN -- "Lord Jesus, Teach Me" is the theme of the program prepared by the First Church of God, teachers and workers for Vacation Bible School classes next Monday through Friday.

Classes will be offered for all ages from beginners (ages 4-5) through sr., youth, and will meet from 7 to 9 o'clock each evening.

Bible learning, Bible-related crafts, singing, refreshments, games and many more, are planned. Also, some of the Sesame Street puppets will be featured.

For free transportation on the church bus, call telephone number 688-2428 or 688-2984.

On Friday night, the Rev. H.G. Earl, pastor, has announced that a special visitor, the Rev. Rolando Bacani, a missionary-pastor in Minils, Phillippines, will be present and tell about his work in the Philippines. This program will be open to the public.

Evangelist returns to Calvary Assembly

Evangelist Red Dixon of Downing, Calif., will return to Calvary Assembly this weekend for two services only, according to Pastor T. A. McDonough.

The Rev. Mr. Dixon recently conducted a successful four-week crusade at the church, during which many people accepted Christ, and numerous others rededicated their lives to the Lord. He was joined during the crusade by his children who are active in evangelistic work, and is expected to be accompanied on this visit by his two unmarried children, Renee and Greg.

Calvary Assembly is located at the corner of Scott and Trotter streets. Sunday's services will include Sunday School at 9:30 a.m. and worship services at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. A nursery is provided for each service.

1st Baptist VBS to include adults

Vacation Bible School will be conducted next week at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St., and this year Bible classes for adults will be included for the first time.

The Bible school will open Monday and close Friday, with sessions scheduled from 6:30 to 8:30 each evening. In addition to adults, classes will be offered for children from age 3 through sixth grade.

Bible study, missions emphasis, character building and other activities are planned for the children, and refreshments will be served.

Murray Lane plans Disciple Now event

Disciple Now, an intensive program designed to teach youth what it means to be a disciple of Jesus Christ, will be presented July 28-31 at Murray Lane Baptist Church, 807 W. Murray Lane.

The four-night program will begin with a fellowship-study time at 9 p.m. Thursday. Beginning Friday, groups of six to eight young people will enter designated homes at 7 p.m. for programs which will continue in the homes through Sunday evening.

Revival series set at Vanduser church

VANDUSER -- Revival services will begin Sunday and continue each evening through July 31 at the Vanduser Baptist Church, according to the Rev. Lawrence Ray, pastor. The services will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. on weekdays.

The evangelist will be the Rev. Lee Fansler, pastor of First Baptist Church in Bertrand. Mike Parker of Sikeston will be the song leader.

Nursery care will be provided for all services.

Galileans to sing in Charleston church

Charleston -- The Galileans of Dallas, Tex. will present a gospel concert at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Charleston Church of the Nazarene, 718 Thorn St.

The Galileans devote full time to their gospel music ministry. They have traveled with the Happy Goodman family and have appeared on the award winning "Gospel Singing Jubilee".

The concert is open to the public.

No admission will be charged, but a "free will" offering will be taken.

WHAT IS GOD LIKE?

Dear Mr. Swaim, I have often wondered what God is really like. True, some of his qualities are revealed in the Bible, but I wish I could have a more complete knowledge of His nature.

Some people say that all we can know about God is that He is absolute. Others say God is the expression that is in nature and in life. Still, others indicate that God is the original force who started things, and that through a process of evolution, we have what we do today. These and other philosophies concerning God have been expressed again and again. The real problem of trying to define the nature of God is that the attempt itself is limited and God cannot be limited. The Bible teaches that God is a spirit, that He is not bound by fleshy limitations, that He can be everywhere at once. The Bible teaches that God is a person. Such expressions as "God loves, God says, God does, indicate that He has a personality, that He is One who feels things, wishes, desires and has every expression of personality

The Bible also teaches that God is a holy and righteous being, that He cannot lie, that His mercy and justice are perfect. For this reason we can trust Him completely, recognizing that by knowing all there is to know, he can make decisions that are right in the ultimate sense. The Bible also teaches that God is love. Unfortunately, many people have misunderstood this part of God's nature. The love of God indicates that He wants what is best for us and will do whatever He possibly can to insure our happiness and salvation, but we must recognize that God has limited Himself and that He has placed certain restrictions on man and we must fulfill these in order to receive the grace and salvation He provides. It would be impossible to completely describe the nature of God in a brief article. Let me simply say that the Bible is a book written to reveal God to us. If you will take the time to study it and if you will read it, you will come to realize that God's nature is very much like ours; that He possesses in a perfect degree all good qualities which we possess in a lesser degree, and that our real challenge is to become as much like Him as possible, recognizing that to the degree we do, we will find completeness.

Heifer Project thrives where others falter

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — International charities which try to nourish people in starving nations often fight a losing battle, but one group has a method that comes close to providing a perpetual source of food.

When a Heifer Project International plane lands in an underdeveloped country, a herd of cows strolls down the ramp.

The theory is to provide unending sustenance, according to Bill Peck, director of Heifer's Pacific Central Regional Office here. He said farm machinery and equipment may break down, crops may fail, supplies of food and medicine may run out ...

"But cows give milk until they die, provide offspring to keep up the supply and serve as catalysts around which community development can happen."

Heifer's 40-year-history abounds with examples that support Beck's claim. Cattle shipped to the Japanese island of Hokkaido in the early 1960s spawned that country's booming dairy industry, Beck said.

And on a smaller but no less dramatic level, 10 head of cattle flown to a mountain village near Pusan, Korea, several years ago have grown to a herd of 300, triggering construction of a milk products plant that revived the area's economy.

Now a $2.5 million-a-year operation that has sent 58,000 head into 96 countries, Heifer Project International grew out of one clergyman's haunting memory of starving Spanish civil war refugees.

Dan West, who died in 1970 at age 76, said he founded the organization because he could not shake the sight of a young girl dying of tuberculosis who might have been saved had she had enough milk.

That grim symbol of global hunger made him dedicate his life to providing as much of the world as possible with nature's most perfect food.

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Children of God have found a new home away from home and a new prophet in his own country — Col. Moammar Khadafy, Libya's deeply religious Moslem president.

Exiles from the cult phenomenon in the United States, some members of the group are receiving moral and material support from Libya in their supervised search for God and fight against drugs, alcohol and the "world's corruption."

Col. Khadafy, who has made the Koran the base of Libyan law, was interested enough in the movement to meet several times with its leaders, to house them for a period, and even to write a song which the "children" have performed throughout the country, and in their communes in other lands.

They now spell his name "Godhafi," to do him special honors and see him as a Christ-like or Mohammed-like figure.

"Do as I do. I pray to God. I'm very happy because I found the road with Allah, Allah, Allah," says the first verse of Khadafy's song. It is addressed to the industrialized nations of the world, and goes on:

"You hate Negros. You do not pray. You are not good. You have lost your way. Your life is falsehood. Without Allah, Allah, Allah."

Although few of the Children of God speak Arabic, their well-kempt, clean-shaven habits have made them something of a hit in Libya with their guitar-strumming and flute-playing band.

They performed recently at an international fair, and give shows at local restaurants, with opening pieces such as "Chukran Allah" (Thank you Allah) and the old U.S. hit, "Bye, Bye, Miss American Pie," which they regard as a theme song for their gradual exodus from the United States, which they have declared doomed.

The movement was started about 1969 by a Californian named David Berg, whom his followers regard as a prophet and call Moses. His "Mo" letters anticipate a violent end to developed nations.

The group, which settled temporarily in Texas, gradually spread elsewhere. They change their names, adopting Scriptural identities, getting support from merchants, parents, street donations and sales of "Mo" letters.

They've appeared at various public places, including the United Nations, dressed in sackcloth, their faces daubed with ashes, symbolizing the coming doom.

They have a French pop musical group, "Les Enfants de Dieu," which has produced several records, and they've recorded commercial cassettes in Brazil. They have discoteques in Rome and Athens and run an antidrug center in Amsterdam.

Berg claims the group has 250,000 converts worldwide, with 5,000 full-time workers in "colonies" proselytizing in 60 countries. But they've run into considerable opposition, including accusations of "brainwashing" in the United States and have been expelled from Lebanon and Madagascar.

"We are the first children's crusade and probably the last one before God's destruction of this wickedly wordly system," says a recent Mo letter, called the "New Nation News."

In recent years, they've increasingly moved away from the industrialized nation's concentrating on Africa and Asia. One of the Libyan-based group, Stephen Bruce Ferguson from Iowa, says:

"This is the land of the future. This is where it's all going to be. You know, the Koran is not much different from the Bible."

Berg, a recluse who never allows himself to be photographed and who now reportedly lives in England, recently met with the Libya's President Khadafy for nine hours, and says they found much in common.

Both ban alcoholic beverages and drugs, claim the poor will inherit the earth and object to pro-Israel Zionists. Wrote Berg of Khadafy:

"There has not been another such worldly political leader in modern times as this young prophet of the seemingly impossible. There has hardly been such a Godly world political leader since the days of his own prophet Mohammed...and the prophets of ancient times, including ...Jesus."

Charismatics claim movement bringing unity to Christianity

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A multitude of about 45,000 "spirit-filled" Protestants and Roman Catholics on Wednesday night sang, prayed and cheered proclamations that God is doing a "new thing" to unite and renew Christianity for a new age.

It was the opening of the first, full-scale ecumenical conference of the nation's charismatic believers. They massed in Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium, lifting their arms skyward in praise of the Lord.

"An astonishing and historic occasion," the Rev. Dr. Howard P. Courtney, a classical Pentecostal leader of Glendale, Calif., told the mixed throng drawn together by a common spiritual experience.

"It is the fulfillment of the mighty flowing power of God. Bringing us all together in these times for the glory, honor and praise of Christ."

Not before in modern history had all three wings of the movement met jointly, including old-line Pentecostals and the "neo-Pentecostals" or charismatics that have surged recently both in main-line Protestantism and Catholicism.

From a yellow draped floodlit platform on the football field's 40 yard line he said, "Unity is a here and now reality, growing by leaps and bounds. The Lord has called us to be one people."

Altogether there are now an estimated 10 million charismatics in the United States, about half of them developing in the last decade in established denominations—Lutherans, Episcopalians, Methodists, Catholics, Presbyterians and others.

Exhibiting a fervent spontaneity and expressiveness in faith, they attributed to a "baptism of the Holy Spirit" endowing them with gifts of teaching, healing, evangelical zeal and speaking in unknown tongues.

They trace the phenomenon back to the first Pentecost in anchient Jerusalem, described in Acts II when God was said to have poured out his spirit on people of many nations, uniting them in common understanding.

It's happening again now, various speakers said. "We're seeing the miracle here before our own eyes," declared the Rev. Vinson Synan from Oklahoma City, general secretary of the Pentecostal Holiness Church.

"We are one in the spirit and one in the Lord."

At intervals shouts of "praise the lord" and "Hallelujah" rang out. "How great is our Lord," the crowd sang, swaying and clapping their hands. A huge banner hung at one end of the stadium saying, "Jesus is Lord."

It was a variegated crowd, old and young, a sprinkling of blacks and nuns and priests in religious garb, mostly white people in shirt sleeves, shorts and cotton dresses.

'God and Country' program revitalized

NEW YORK (AP) — In the midst of all the peer pressures, come-on appeals, pop fads and persuasions, "How do you respond? It is your life! What anchor points hold fast?"

That's one of the questions raised for analysis by young people in a newly developed "God and Country" training course of Scouting, U.S.A., aimed at revitalizing the religious dimensions of the movement.

That aspect "had become pretty much a dead letter, in effect, and we're now rebuilding it," said LeRoy W. Nattress Jr. of Chicago, chairman of the national Church Commission on Scouting. "We anticipate a high degree of recouping."

In that effort, religious principles are presented as a stabilizing ground for which a young person can evaluate the mixed, conflicting pressures of the modern environment and make sound decisions shaping his life.

"As you have outgrown childhood ... you are faced with the need to plan, to make decisions," says a training guide. "You also are facing pressures and persuasive arguments which test the values and morality which you accept."

The issue thus becomes whether you cave in, or have a basis for convictions that holds steady, it is pointed out, with the outcome determining whether you fulfill your own selfhood or fall victim to surrounding influences.

That's only one example, however, of the many growing-up issues put before high school-age Explorer Scouts in the advanced phase of the new program, which also includes earlier stages for Cub Scouts (9 and 10 years old) and for scouts (11 to 14).

The new program, unlike its dwindling predecessor, enlists participation both by parents and church counsellors as well as by the youths working to master it.

"It builds supports back in the family, bringing out discussion of questions that parents have been avoiding with their young," says Nattress, 44, an educational psychologist. "It makes for new understanding and restores a link in the family in a time when families are disintegrating all around us."

In 1790, Philadelphia was the largest city in the U.S., with a population of 42,444.

Gallup says U.S. may be in early stage of revival

NEW YORK (AP) — Pollster George Gallup Jr. said today that recent surveys have found mounting evidence that the United States "may be in an early stage of a profound religious revival."

Writing in the June issue of the Journal of Current Social Issues, Gallup said evidence for his suggestion included a rise in church attendance in 1976, for the first time in nearly two decades.

He said his survey showed 42 per cent of Americans attended church or synagogue in a typical week.

"Our surveys also showed church membership to be on the upswing during the year, with about seven in 10 now describing themselves as church members," he wrote.

He said six in 10 persons surveyed now say their religious beliefs are "very important" and he cited as further evidence of revival the considerable interest in what he termed experimental religion, such as mysticism, yoga and transcendental meditation.

He said the evangelical movement appeared to be "providing a powerful thrust" for the current religious revival.

But Gallup said the surveys suggested that America may be only "superficially religious" with religion on the upswing, "while "morality is losing its influence."

He said that while 94 per cent of persons responding to Gallup interviews said they believed in "God, or a universal spirit," only 44 per cent said they had "a great deal of confidence in organized religion."

Carter tells how role as president could be wrong

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Carter once told his Sunday school class that it would have been wrong for him to assume the nation's highest office if ' came between him and Go.. ' Carter's Sunday school teache..

Fred M. Gregg Jr., formerly of Nashville, is the lay teacher at Carter's Sunday school class at First Baptist Church in Washington. He said class attendance was about 15 when he started teaching last fall. Now, about 135 persons come to class when Carter is there.

Gregg said in an interview that his greatest reward has been the chance to see "what a dedicated, born-again Christian the President is."

"I've heard him pray, when there were only the two of us, and the President would pour out his heart to God and ask God to help him do His will," Gregg said.

The President asked Gregg not to "make any fanfare over me — just let me come in there and be a member of that Sunday school class."

"He told me that he wakes up on Sunday mornings and just can't wait to come to Sunday school," the teacher said, adding that Carter teaches the class when Gregg can not be there.

On one occasion, the President told the class there are many people who, like a rich, young ruler in the Bible, "let something come between him and God."

Gregg quoted Carter as saying, "If becoming President of the United States had come between me and God, it would have been wrong."

Kaintuck features Marty Robbins

BENTON,Ky. -- Marty Robbins, country singing star, and well known gospel groups, The Kingsmen and Jerry & The Singing Goffs, will appear in four concerts this Sunday, at Kaintuck Territory.

Robbins will perform at 2 and 5 pm, and The Kingsmen and Jerry & The Singing Goffs will perform at 12 and 3 pm.

He sings polynesian, Mexican, western, country, and pop. He has written over 400 songs, including "White Sport Coat", "Devil Woman", "Don't Worry", "Big Iron", "You Gave Me a Mountain", "My Woman, My Woman, My Wife", and the classic "El Paso", and has a number of gold records and gold guitar awards to attest to his composing and singing ability.

Robbins has starred in about a dozen movies and has his own television and movie production company, with distribution through Universal Pictures of Hollywood. His television credits include most ot the top shows in television. A few examples are: "The Dean Martin Show", KraftMusic Hall" and "The Johnny Cash Show". He has been the host on several of the "Midnight Special" shows.

He is also a race car driver. Although he only has time to run in about four or five of the big races a year and although he might tell you he only does it as a hobby, he is still consistently among the top 10 finishers. He is respected by the other drivers on the NASCAR circuit, both as a person and as a race driver.

An exciting day at Kaintuck Territory which will include the concerts, all the shows, rides and attractions at the park, are covered by a one price admission. Kaintuck Territory is located five miles southwest of Kentucky Dam on highway 641, in western Kenturcky's lakes area.

For information write: Kaintuck Territory, Benton, KY 42025, or call, (502) 527-1393 or 1394.

Judge loses his job over cup of coffee

NEW YORK (AP) — A coffee vendor whose product so displeased a county judge that he was hauled into court in handcuffs and given a tongue-lashing has been awarded $141,000 for violation of his civil rights.

Suffolk County Judge William Perry lost his $40,990 job over a cup of coffee.

A Brooklyn federal court jury awarded 37-year-old Thomas Zarcone $80,000 in compensatory damages, to be paid by Perry and Deputy Sheriff James Windsor, who handcuffed Zarcone; $60,000 in punitive damages, to be paid by Perry; and $1,000 in punitive damages from Windsor.

A spokesman for the Royal Globe Insurance Co., which insures judges for compensatory damages, confirmed Wednesday that Zarcone rejected an out-of-court settlement of $205,000 offered by Royal Globe and Perry. He had sued for $5 million.

"I am very relieved," said Zarcone.

Zarcone said he had no regrets about not taking the out-of-court offer, explaining that he would have had to drop a claim now pending in state court in Riverhead.

According to testimony, Judge Perry had sent Sheriff Windsor to buy coffee from Zarcone's truck outside the courthouse on the evening of April 30, 1975. Ten minutes later, Zarcone testified, he was handcuffed and told "to come to the judge's chambers to see about the coffee, because it was terrible."

Perry had testified, "I was irritated by the quality of the coffee and I felt it was an injustice on all of the people who had to go to court that evening and buy the product."

Zarcone said Perry yelled at him and claimed his coffee had been watered down. He said the incident, which occurred in traffic court in Hauppauge, N.Y., caused him to have nightmares in which he saw Perry hurling daggers at him. He said courthouse workers stopped buying food and beverages at his truck, forcing him out of business.

Perry was removed from the bench 12 days ago by the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court for having given "false testimony" about the incident.

Number of claimants decreases 10 per cent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The number of Missouri's unemployment insurance claimants was down by almost 10 per cent in June compared to the previous year, according to the state Division of Unemployment Security.

The division said the total number of claimants, at 65,430, decreased 6,970 from the previous year's total of 72,400.

Division Director Joesph Dietrich said the drop was partly because of the seasonal increase in outside work activities.

New claims were up slightly as special unemployment assistance requests increased by 4,313 to 6,123 as schools closed for the summer, Dietrich said.

The total benefit payments were more than $16.36 million, he added.

Informal 1960 recording to benefit Audie Murphy family

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When Harry Nilsson made an informal recording in Hollywood in 1960, he had no idea the material would benefit the family of the late actor and World War II hero Audie Murphy 17 years later.

Thanks to the generosity of Nilsson and the thoughtfulness of Nashville record producer Scotty Turner, proceeds from the current album "Nilsson: Early Tymes" will go to Murphy's widow and two sons.

Nilsson agreed to release the previously unused material out of respect for Turner, who got him started recording. Turner, in turn, wants to help out the Murphy family because he and Murphy were close friends before Murphy died in a 1971 plane crash near Roanoke, Va.

"This shows Harry Nilsson is a superstar in his heart as well as in music," Turner said.

Although Murphy was a successful actor as well as a songwriter, his estate is tied up in litigation. So Turner particularly wants to help Murphy's elder son, Terry, 25, who aspires to be a singer or songwriter.

"If you can't help out your best friend's son, you're not too good of a person," said Turner, who has produced more than 70 acts in his 20-year career.

Murphy and Turner wrote 18 songs together, including "Shutters And Boards," recorded by Jerry Wallace and Dean Martin, and "When The Wind Blows In Chicago," recorded by Roy Clark.

"Audie couldn't carry a tune in a bucket but he was a magician with words," Turner recalled.

They were such close friends that Murphy was the godfather to Turner's daughter and gave Turner some of his war medals.

"He wasn't pompous," Turner said. "He never claimed he was a great actor and didn't like to watch his own pictures."

Nilsson, who was 17 when the album was recorded, met Turner in Los Angeles just before the informal recording session.

"I was hanging around a publisher's office and there was a kid there with a guitar between his knees," Turner recalled. "He said he sang and wrote, so we went into a music room and he was the best I'd ever heard."

Turner later took him to various music companies. Nine years later, after winning a Grammy Award for "Everybody's Talkin'," Nilsson wrote to Turner: "I owe you my beginning."

Then two years ago, the unused tapes turned up from Nilsson's 1960 recording session — his first. Turner asked for, and received, authority to release the voice track with the addition of some finishing instrumentation and background voices.

Mitchell addresses Kiwanis

Robert Mitchell Jr. of Mitchell Insurance, Inc., Sikeston, told the Kiwanis Club of Sikeston Tuesday that too few voices have been raised in this country protesting the "outrageous awards being made to persons taking advantage of our legal system to get rich quick."

Speaking on behalf of the Independent Insurance Agents of Missouri (IIAM), he cited the example of a lawnmower manufacturer who was held liable for injuries resulting from an incident in which two men picked up a lawnmower and used it to trim a hedge.

He pointed out that under new legal interpretations, the seller or manufacturer of a product is asked to guarantee safety for the user, regardless of the negligence of the user.

The speaker added that products have been subject to litigation regardless of their age. One St. Louis firm, for example, was recently named the defendant in a suit based on an injury caused by a machine that was almost 100 years old.

He said manufacturers are being held liable in cases where their products have been improperly maintained, or modified by the owner.

The public's increasing propensity to sue is evidenced in the number of liability suits, which have increased from about 40,000 a year in the 1960's, to hundreds of thousands a year by the early 1970's. And to make matters worse, in 1972 the average award in such cases was over six times greater than what it was in 1965, he added.

The IIAM speaker said the liability explosion is forcing business and professional people to increase the prices of their goods and services in order to make up for the higher premiums they must now pay for product liability and malpractice insurance.

He said one Missouri firm that produces special pressure release devices has found that their liability coverage will increase from $5,000 to $145,000 a year -- if they can get it at all.

"Despite what some may think, insurance companies do not pay claims out of some bottomless pool of funds," he said. In 1975, for example, $2 was either paid or reserved for payment of claims by insurance companies for every $1 in premiums they collected for product liability coverage. This is the insurance purchased by those who make or sell products to compensate users who suffer injury or damage as a result of using that product.

"We must all work together to obtain relief in the form of innovative legislation to prevent the unfair redistribution of our country's economic and financial resources which is resulting from huge awards being given to a relatively few successful litigants and their attorneys," the speaker concluded.

Among legislative proposals and tort reforms he outlined which could alleviate the problem are:

— Adoption of a reasonable statute of limitations starting from the date of the sale of the product.

— Recognition in the courts of the "state of the art" when the product was manufactured.

— Recognition in the courts of the accountability of the owner-user as to maintenance, operation, supervision, training, safety devices, warnings, etc.

— Limits on the amount of lawyers' contingency fees.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, Wiley Post completed the first round-the-world solo flight in his plane, the "Winnie May."

On this date —

In 1937, the U.S. Senate defeated President Franklin Roosevelt's measure to reorganize and enlarge the Supreme Court.

In 1943, in World War II, Allied forces captured the capital of Sicily, Palermo.

In 1950, King Leopold III returned to Belgium after six years in exile.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon ended months of speculation by announcing that he wanted Vice President Spiro Agnew as his running mate again, in the election to be held in 1972.

One year ago: The House of Representatives overrode President Gerald Ford's veto of a $4 billion public works program to create more jobs.

Thought for today: By your works ye shall be known. — The Bible.

C. A. Fink was checked in as agent of the Iron Mountain road at Sikeston Monday to succeed J. E. Dover, who went to the agency at Jefferson Barracks a month ago. Mr. Fink comes here from Neelyville, where he was agent for the Iron Mountain for the past three years.

Sikeston at last has its flag pole raised with its starry banner floating proudly at the height of a hundred feet. Two of the couplings of the pole were broken a few weeks ago when an effort was made to raise it, and new couplings were ordered.

J. W. Black, J. F. Cox, Ed and Allie McCord last week divided among themselves a tract of 640 acres of alnd which they bought two years ago near Lilbourn and owned in partnership. They each took 160 acres.

Poe Casebeer and family passed through Sikeston yesterday on their way from Blodgett to Essex, where they will reside.

Construction work on the Nazarene Church at the corner of Scott and Trotter streets is progressing nicely. The walls, which are of hollow tile, and the roof of the building are practically completed.

The Lutherans of Sikeston and vicinity have bought the building on College avenue, in the north part of town formerly owned and used by L. C. Erdmann as a warehouse for automobiles. The building will be remodeled and used as a temporary house of worship by the Lutherans, who for some months past have been having services twice a month in the community building at Miner.

Crops in the Hooe School district, north of Vanduser, were badly damaged by hail Tuesday when a heavy rain fell throughout the territory north and west of Sikeston.

The emergency plant being installed by the Missouri Utilities is rapidly nearing completioin. The plant is housed in a new addition to the present plant and can be put in operation on short notice.

Drawings for the first rounds of the city tennis tournament have been made by Coach Wm. E. Mahew and play will get under way Saturday. Two players were seeded–Buddy Lair, last year's men's winner, and Emily Mattingly, champioin of the women last season.

Matthews Public Schools. The district-wide WPA project, which has been under way since last summer, and which is practically completed, has been discontinued until after the completino of the levee work. At that time, about October, we expect to complete the few remaining incompleted items and begin work on a gymnasium project, which has been approved for some time.

Domestic robot nears production

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A company here plans to manufacture a 5-foot-2, 180-pound robot that can serve your dinner, vacuum your rugs, babysit for your kids and insult your enemies.

"We've programmed the robot to approximate human behavior. The only limitations to what it can do is the boundary of imagination and the cost factor," says Anthony Reichelt, president of Quasar Industries Inc.

The robot, which the company calls a domestic android, has been researched for the past eight years and is now in the final testing stages. "We're about 22 months away from production," Reichelt said, adding the robots will sell for under $4,000.

Quasar's only business is manufacturing robots. Until now, the company's robots have been used for animated props and as promotional gimmicks.

"This whole science is in its infancy," Reichelt said. "Instead of just kidding around with promotional things, we've reached the state of the art to come out this summer with a paramedic robot."

The paramedic robit is considered by some medical authorities to be a useful psychological tool in dealing with autistic children, Reichelt said.

"We put on a show for kids at a hospital in Scranton, Pa., last summer. An 11-year-old there had been hurt in a car accident in which one brother was killed and another brother seriously injured. The boy regained consciousness but refused to talk to anyone," he said.

"We sent the robit in and it started talking to the boy. When there was no response, the robot called the boy a 'dummy,' which we programmed it to call nearly everyone. Within 20 minutes, the kid was babbling away. Doctors had spent days trying to get him to talk," Reichelt said.

It is shaped like a cone with a bubble head and two arms. It carries a computer which can be programmed by the owner with a calculator-like device, he said.

The robot responds to an owner's voice.

If anyone breaks into the owner's house, the robot is programmed to sound an alarm. It then goes to the point of entry and verbally challenges the intruder, Reichelt said.

The robot can be programmed to speak any language. "We can have it become anything you want, from a Japanese houseboy to a French maid. It can also give foreign language lessons," he said.

What's the law?

The case of the too-secret will

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Mr. Wimple was so secretive that he didn't even talk to himself. Consequently, when he decided to make a will, he cautiously arranged for two of his neighbors to witness his signature without telling them what kind of document he had signed. In fact, he folded it over so that no part of it could be read.

Years later, when Mr. Wimple finally died, it developed that in addition to being very aged, he was also well-seasoned: During his lifetime he had salted away a small fortune. And consequently, when several of his relatives found out that they had been disinherited, they attacked the validity of his will in court.

"To be legal," they argued, "a will must be witnessed by people who know what they are witnessing. In this case, the witnesses didn't know what they were witnessing. As far as they knew, it could have been the Declaration of Independence."

"That's ridiculous," responded the executor named in Mr. Wimple's will. "A will is as personal as a love affair. If a man wants to keep his will entirely under wraps so that no one will know what they'll receive upon hi death – if anything -- he has the absolute right to do it. To will or not to will -- that is his secret."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of Mr. Wimple's will?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that "to witness" means to see something done. In this case, Mr. Wimple's witnesses did not see him sign his alleged will since they did not know what he was signing. While they saw him sign something, concluded the judge, they had no idea what it was.

Makowicz Enters U.S. Jazz Scene

AP Newsfeatures

"I just finished making an album with Adam Makowicz," says record producer John Hammond, who has worked with a lot of greats during his long, distinguished career, "and it's one of the best albums I ever had anything to do with."

It's also the first album made in America by Polish jazz pianist Makowicz, 37, making his first visit here May through July this year. He's playing at the Cookery in Greenwich Village and exciting a lot of interest among New York's knowledgeable jazz fans.

Hammond says that early last summer, "somebody put a record by this fellow on my desk. I listened to it and immediately got in touch with Benny Goodman who was going over to Poland. I asked him if he'd listen to him. Benny never did, but he brought back a cassette of him playing that was even better than what I'd heard on the record.

"I really went to work. I got in touch with the International Jazz Federation in Eastern Europe. I got Barney Josephson interested in booking him at the Cookery. I got Willis Conover of the Voice of America to hear him and a CBS lawyer in on it and we got working papers and an exit visa for him."

Makowicz, speaking between sets in surprisingly good English, says papers permitting him to work in America are harder to come by than an exit visa from Poland. "There are hundreds of American musicians playing all over Europe with never any problem. But the American musicians' union doesn't like it if a European musician wants to play here.

"England is the second most difficult place to get permission to work. At a jazz festival in London in April I played with Clark Terry's big band, but I played only one concert because of the permission problem.

Makowicz plays both in Eastern and Western Europe. In January, when Jazz Forum magazine polled its readers to select "Top People '77," there were 1,306 replies from 32 countries. Makowicz received 374 votes to place No. 1 in the European jazz pianist category.

He was born in Czechoslovakia, lives now in Warsaw, as do his parents, now retired.

ADAM MAKOWICZ

His mother, a piano teacher, taught him classical piano for nine years. "I was 7 years old when I heard jazz on records and radio. From that time, I wanted to play only jazz; I liked the sound better."

Asked about pianists he has listened to, Makowicz says, "Art Tatum was the greatest. Erroll Garner had the greatest influence on me."

Hammond says, "Unlike what some writers have said, Adam is in no way a copy or competitor of Art Tatum. You can tell he likes Keith Jarrett but he has a much better technique than Keith. He was influenced by Tatum, obviously. He has been really trying to find something of his own and I think he has."

He started playing outside Poland about 10 years ago, after making his professional debut in Poland, with a group, in 1962. For four years he worked with Michal Urbaniak and his wife, singer Urszula Dudziak, in avant-garde style, with electric piano.

Hammond says, "I made Columbia release a record he made with Urszula in Switzerland, called 'Newborn Light,' that was very avant-garde. I didn't care if it only sold 500 copies. He's a master of the Fender electronic piano. She was singing in quarter tones."

However, Makowicz prefers the acoustic, grand piano, and he likes to play solo. He usually gives concerts rather than appearing in clubs. He has made about 30 albums in Europe, the latest four of them solo albums.

For his job in New York, in a restaurant, he is stressing melody, standard tunes, with fairly short treatments of each one, and is downplaying his avant-garde side.

"I want to make it more easy for listening," he says. "It's not the same public as at jazz festivals."

In Europe, he says, each country has one or two very good jazz pianists. Jazz in Europe, he says, is considered art with a capital A. "At jazz festivals, each musician plays a new program of his own compositions, to show what he has to contribute now to jazz.

"When I write a new composition, I play it first for my wife. She says, 'It is good,' or, 'Maybe you should change it.' "

Makowicz has been booked for the solo piano night at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York, along with Earl "Fatha" Hines, Teddy Wilson and George Shearing. The evening is dedicated to Erroll Garner.

He knows English, Makowicz says, because that's what musicians from many countries speak to each other when they meet in Europe.

When Urbaniak and his wife came to America, they stayed. Hammond is pleased that Makowicz is returning to Poland. "I want to encourage people when they come here to go back. Otherwise the authorities will stop letting anybody come."

"I got one hour and 20 minutes of usable music in a three-hour session," Hammond says. "That's how good he was. I just finished editing the album and there's not one splice in the whole thing. I think it's the first time it ever happened.

"He's superbly equipped with taste and technique. Columbia will release the album in August or September. We may call it 'Adam's Cooking.' But that title's probably not as good as he deserves."

New job office to open in Dexter

DEXTER -- Jack Keane, director of the division of industrial relations for the State of Missouri, will be in Dexter Aug. 1 to officiate at the opening of the new division of employment security office on Sassafras Street.

The building has been occupied by the district welfare office staff, but that group has now moved, and the employment security staff is in the process of moving in, Smith said.

The building is owned by Gary Dowdy, local builder, who is also under contract to construct an addition to the present building on the south side ot house the district welfare office staff. Work is expected to begin on this structure in the next few days.

Smith, who has been active not only in securing the employment office for Dexter but also in keeping the district welfare office here, is in charge of plans for the Aug. 1 ceremony. Mayor Willis Conner and other city and state officials are expected to participate.

SeMo District Fair set Sept. 13-17

CAPE GIRARDEAN -- The annual Southeast Missouir Distriuct Fair will be held at the Arena Park Sept. 13-17.

Connie Smith, "The Grand Ole Opry" star, and Hank Thompson will perform Friday night. Ray Stevens, noted for "The Streak," "Everything is Beautiful," and many more popular songs, will perform Saturday night.

Five days and nights of entertainment are planned including: Sept. 13, the tractor pull contest; Sept. 14, the Joie Chitwood Auto Thrill Show, and Sept. 15, the Grand Demolition Derby -- all at 8 p.m. in the grandstand!

Friday and Saturday afternoons, Sept. 16 and 17, the SeMo District Fair will offer free grandstand attractions of harness racing and the worlfamous Budweiser Champion Clydesdales.

The midway carnival will provide thrills for all ages.

Truckload of hams ripped off

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The FBI Thursday entered a case in which a load of $50,000 worth of canned hams bound from Omaha for Florida was sold in Kansas Wednesday.

Police said the driver apparently stole the semitrailer while working for Watkins Motorlines, Inc., of Omaha. Watkins said one of its trailer rigs failed to arrive on schedule in Florida Wednesday.

The company said the trailer contained nearly 35,000 pounds of Farmland brand canned hams when it left Omaha last Thursday.

Meanwhile, Kansas Bureau of Investigation agents notified Omaha police that Farmland Hams were being sold Wednesday in the Topeka area at below cost. A Kansas official said a chain of tire stores had purchased a truckload of hams.

Watkins Motorlines employes told Omaha police that last Thursday a mam answered a newspaper ad the company had placed for a truck driver. He supplied the company with a name and credentials identifying him as as an experienced driver from Kansas, and they hired him.

Wednesday, police said, the employes picked a picture from the FBI mug files that they identified as that of the man who drove off in the truck. Police said the 41-year-old man identified was known to bilked other companies in similar schemes in the past.

Fish kill conditions still prevail

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - The biological conditions which caused the massive fish kill last week in the Osage River below Bagnell Dam continue to pose problems, according to state Department of Conservation officials.

The recent kill destroyed an estimated one million fish, mostly shad. Authorities said the fish died because of a lack of oxygen caused by warm water and organic materials in the water.

Those conditions sill exist and "pose unusual biological threat to the Lake of the Ozarks and the Osage River below Bagnell Dam," the department said Wednesday.

"What we need is for the lake to settle down and settle out so that plant life can start once again to kick some oxygen into the system," said Stanley michealson, a fisheries biologist with the department.

Michealson said many factors probaboly caused the fish kill, includng heavy rains which washed decomposable material into thelake. Such material uses up oxygen as it decomposes, he said.

In addition, he said turbid water, which shuts out sunlight, caused the aquatic life to die, thus using more oxygen.

RESOLUTION

A RESOLUTION DECLARING THE NECESSITY FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF ONE AND ONE-HALF INCH HOTMIX ASPHALTIC PAVEMENT ON A STABILIZED BASE WITH CONCRETE CURB AND GUTTERS ON BLANTON STREET FROM THE WEST SIDE OF DEMPSTER STREET TO THE NORTH SIDE OF BUTLER STREET. IN THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI; STATING THE NATURE OF THE IMPROVEMENT; THE ESTIMATED COST AND PROVIDING THAT PAYMENT FOR ALL OF THE IMPROVEMENT SHALL BE MADE BY SPECIAL TAX BILLS LEVIED AND ASSESSED AGAINST THE ABUTTING PROPERTY.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SIKESTON, STATE OF MISSOURI AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said improvement in accordance with the plans and specifications necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston.

Section 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials, and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement.

Section 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $8.50 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement.

Section 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the Statutes of the State of Missouri and the Ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council, the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement.

Section 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri.

Section 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that is shall be published for seven consecutive insertions.

By GARY HARDEE
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The heat wave that has parched Missouri during July may make memories of last winter's bitter cold seem distant. But most of Missouri's elderly and poor have constant reminders of those freezing days: leftover, unpaid utility bills or service that has been cut off.

The Missouri Department of Social Services has drafted a plan using $5.8 million of federal money to help the state's needy pay utility debts, but the department only has until Aug. 31 to determine who is eligible for the program.

"This is a one-shot deal," James Bergfalk, deputy director of the department, says. "We had very little notice to put this program together. We were told June 1 to develop a plan, and at the end of August we'll have to cut off applications for the money."

According to the department's plan, which Bergfalk believes is "the most equitable way to distribute the money for the purpose it was intended," utility companies will receive the federal dollars and then pass benefits on to the state's poor in the form of paid debts and resumed service or credit toward future utility bills.

Bergfalk said half of the $5.8 million will be devoted to helping poor persons over age 65, while the other half will help poor under 65.

Because the past winter was so severe, Bergfalk said, utility rates averaged a lot higher throughout Missouri than in the 1975-76 winter. The department plans to pay, through the utility companies, each verified applicant the difference between his utility bills last winter and the bills for the 1975-76 winter.

"Nobody will receive more than the amount their bills increased from the winter of 1975-76," Bergfalk says.

"If we have established that somebody is making less than say $2,500, and they managed to pay their fuel bills, they had to do it at a hardship," Bergfalk adds.

"That being the case, the utility company will credit the difference between the two winter's rates toward that person's future bills," he said.

The plan still awaits approval by the federal Community Services Administration, but Bergfalk's staff already has begun to inform elderly poor who may be eligible for money. He says within the next two weeks, the state's counties will be notified how much money they will receive with which to pay utility companies.

"If we waited to get approval before contacting possible eligible participants in the program we might not get all of the money dispersed," Bergfalk says. "I think we can distribute all of the money."

Bergfalk says the department is mailing letters to poor persons that the state already assists through other programs informing them of their eligibility. Social welfare organizations throughout the state will be responsible for "spreading the word" about the program to persons the department does not know about, Bergfalk says. Bergfalk believes considering the short notice, the plan is a good one.

"I know the plan will be subject to some criticism and there is always some potential for fraud, but I'm confident we are going about it in the best way," he said. "From the fuel supplier's standpoint, we are eliminating bad debt; from the consumer's standpoint, payment of bad debt should modify any rate increase, and those facing cutoff or who have been cutoff will keep or get their service back."

To avoid paying money for persons not eligible to receive it, Bergfalk says the department will double check its lists of eligible persons with the utility companies' lists of persons owing payments.

Bergfalk says utility companies must sign an agreement to use the federal money to help poor persons before they can receive the cash.

"We'll do some post auditing and some spot checking, (to make sure the money is used properly) but it would be hard to monitor everyone," he says. "We feel that if a person felt he should get credit (on his utility bills) and didn't, he would contact us.

"We feel that if we had spent more time on fraud control, we never would get the money dispersed. Every government reaches a point that it costs more money to make sure it doesn't get ripped off than it would if they got ripped off a little bit," he said.
